The B.C. Supreme Court has vetoed provincial government approval for a sewage outfall at Esquimalt Lagoon.

In a landmark decision, the court ruled Friday the cabinet exceeded its powers when it countermanded a decision by the provincial Pollution Control Board.

The court said the cabinet cannot set itself up as a court of appeal to rule on its own legislation.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's department said about 60 other provincial statutes could be affected by the ruling.

In addition, any other cases where the cabinet has overruled the PCB would have to be re-examined.

Albert Head Ratepayers Association president Shirley Wilde, who led a four-year citizens' battle against the outfall, said today she is "absolutely delighted."

"This shows you can take on the provincial government and win."

She said the decision will save the Albert Head beach for swimming.

"It is one of the few remaining clean beaches in the region and it would have been a terrible shame to have it polluted. Thousands of people were worried that the beach would be ruined."

She said she has been talking to ratepayer groups in the Keremeos-Cawston area where the cabinet allowed a sewage disposal project to go ahead despite a counter ruling by the PCB.

"This decision will help those citizens to overturn that cabinet ruling."

The events began four years ago when Block Bros. proposed a 70-home subdivision east of Albert Head.

Because some lots could not pass the percolation test for septic tanks, the developers proposed to leave some good lots unsold and have sewage drain into the land in the reserved area.

The regional board allowed the project to proceed on that basis but after lots were sold and homes were being constructed, health authorities questioned whether the land-drain process would work. A proposal for a sewage lagoon and outfall was substituted but this was rejected by the PCB because it would pollute the waters and beaches.

A group of citizens who had already bought lots in the subdivision threatened to sue the regional district.

The cabinet told the citizens it would agree to review the PCB order if they would drop their lawsuit.

After a hearing the cabinet overturned the PCB ruling.

This provoked anger from other residents in the district who were concerned about the effects on swimming areas.

Members of the Albert Head Ratepayers Association and other ratepayers formed The Concerned Citizens of B.C. and hired Victoria lawyer Robert Price to take the issue to the B.C. Supreme Court.

The group got 9,000 signatures on a petition opposing the sewer lagoon.

Price today said he was pleased, but not surprised, by the victory.

He said it appeared clear the cabinet could not act as a court of appeal over its own legislation.

Price said the court recognized that Ottawa was the only government that could perform that function, under Section 96 of the British North America Act.

Price said an appeal is properly only a question of law and the cabinet is not necessarily expert in that field.

The decision means the proposed $350,000 lagoon and outfall cannot be constructed for the housing project. No work had been done on the lagoon.

They aren't burning crosses, yet, but B.C.'s Klu Klux Klan is growing

By DEREK SIDENIUS

They haven't taken to burning crosses — yet — but B.C.'s growing membership in the notorious Klu Klux Klan is emerging from the shadows and showing its color.

Pure white.

The existence of the super-secret racist group in the province has been based for years only on rumors and speculation.

But enter Wolfgang Droege.

The 30-year-old Victorian is one KKK member who isn't afraid to speak out.

Call him a racist and he considers it a compliment.

"To me, all that means is someone who's proud of his own heritage," he says.

Call him a bigot and expect a different response.

"I object to that. A bigot is someone who discriminates and doesn't know why."

Droege, who quit his job with a Victoria printing firm last fall to become an organizer with the KKK, admits he discriminates against Jews and blacks and all those others whose skins aren't white. Why? Because mixing them all together produces disharmony, even chaos.

He believes races should return to their land of origin or, if the transplanted roots are too deep — as in the case of the American negro — then create a separate nation for them.

What would be the boundaries?

"We're still working on that," he says.

Racial purity — that's what Droege's drumming.

And a surprising number of others are swinging to the same beat.

Since the B.C. KKK chapter was formed 18 months ago, membership has been steadily climbing and stands today at about 100, he says.

Most are in the Lower Mainland, especially Surrey, but practically every major city and town in the province has members including Victoria which has four or five on the active list.

The Toronto chapter is the only other organized group in Canada. There used to be a chapter in Alberta but it ceased to exist several years ago.

All told there are about 500 members across the country, Droege says.

It's still a far cry from the 20,000 in the United States where the organization is building strength under the leadership of the outspoken and audacious David Duke, national director and Grand Wizard of the Klan.

The developments in Canada haven't gone unnoticed.

Droege . . . calling him racist is a compliment

Duke was in Vancouver last year and plans a return trip March 30 to April 3. He'll be in Victoria March 31.

Droege, who was born in Nuremberg, Germany, and immigrated to Toronto at age 14, feels the growing interest in the KKK is a sign of the times.

When the economy turns sour, so does the public's tolerance for racial groups different from their own. Those groups become the scapegoats, the major causes of the ills. At least, that's the way the KKK sees it, he says.

"We know there is eventually going to be a depression. We're just preparing for it."

The suggestion that, if he doesn't like it here, why doesn't he return to Germany draws a curt reply: "This is my home now."

Droege says his devotion to extreme right-wing ideas dates back to his preteen days.

He can remember sitting on his grandfather's knee and listening to stories about the Nazis. His grandfather was a personal friend of the infamous Julius Streicher, an early propagandist of the Nazi

Parrot comes out unrepentant

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot, unrepentant to the end, was released from prison today after serving two months of a three-month sentence for defying back-to-work legislation in 1978.

"I don't pretend it was easy but at the same time I think it's the price we had to pay in our struggle for justice," Parrot told reporters outside the gates of the Ottawa-Carleton Regional Detention Centre.

"And we're going to continue that struggle with whatever we have to do in the future."

About 40 supporters from the postal union and from the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which has crusaded in the labor movement on Parrot's behalf, applauded when he arrived at the gate. Some burst into singing "Solidarity Forever."

"Would I do it again? If the same circumstances occurred, there is no doubt."

Hit where it hurts: CLC

Times News Services

The labor movement should start replacing the old-fashioned strike with new forms of forceable, intelligent collective action like the recent mass withdrawal of union funds from a bank, says Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott.

In an obvious reference to the October, 1978, postal workers strike which he has criticized vociferously, McDermott said Friday in Vancouver that in a strong labor movement, unions cannot "run amok unilaterally and expect instant solidarity."

He said a congress affiliate facing a strike situation must sit down with other unions and agree on a planned course of meaningful action, instead of embarking on "headline-grabbing, sporadic, ofttimes suicidal charges of the Light Brigade."

An example of the alternative, McDermott told the National Union of Provincial Government Employees convention, came last November when 14 employees of an eastern branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce were on the verge of striking for a union security clause in a first contract.

Instead, the CLC co-ordinated the mass withdrawal of about $300 million in unions' funds from the bank to protest the employer's refusal to accept the clause, he told delegates.

"The red alert went out at the Bank of Commerce," he said. "The S O S went out, and lo and behold, within two weeks we had that union security. That was collective action."

McDermott said Thursday's settlement of the Bell Canada strike resulted when the labor movement "put our money where our mouth is" and collectively donated $1.5 million to the strikers in less than two weeks.

"We need to demonstrate — in a forceable, intelligent way — real power, in the real world, as opposed to the academic world," he said.

Earlier, the recently-jailed president of the 60,000-member Ontario Public Service Employees Union told delegates all workers have an inalienable right to strike illegally.

Sean O'Flynn, who in January served 23 days in jail for contempt of court after he urged Ontario jail guards to stage an illegal three-day strike, said unjust laws must be disobeyed until they are changed.

He earned applause from delegates by saying the guard's illegal strike "was a very responsible action."

"We don't put ourselves above the law; we're part and parcel of society," said O'Flynn, a teacher. "But we do reserve the right to break the law when we have absolutely no alternative open to us."

McDermott, asked if he agreed with O'Flynn's statements, replied: "There is no 'yes or no' answer to that. It depends on the circumstances."

Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, told delegates provincial government employees must cease being shrinking violets and become more political.

Teachers, policemen and hospital employees should belong to the Canadian Labor Congress and the federation of labor, he said.

Dolphins pine to death

MONTREAL (CP) — A strike by municipal blue-collar workers claimed its first victims Friday — a pair of female dolphins from the city aquarium.

Brigitte and Fanny starved to death, having all but refused to eat since their four regular trainers walked off the job with some 5,600 city workers Feb. 12.

Pulled from the water for a blood test, Brigitte died on a stretcher. Fanny was discovered lying on the bottom of the pool.

Of the four dolphins who remain, Kim and Judith are also on the critical list, barely able to summon the energy to swim round their pool.

Vogel probe tilted: watchdog

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of a Kootenay justice council says the ministerial investigation which cleared deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel of interfering in three criminal cases was not fairly conducted.

Joe Lucas, a local butcher and chairman of the Grand Forks justice council, said in an interview that Attorney-General Allan Williams' announcement Wednesday that an investigation cleared Vogel in all cases doesn't answer questions the council has about a local case involving interior lawyer Mickey Moran.

"I would have thought that, if they wanted some answers, they should have come to the people who were asking the questions," he said.

"I don't think the review was fair without my being interviewed and I don't think it was fair in the conclusion they came to. I think the obligation of the attorney-general's department is greater than just making the statement they did."

The allegations of interfering in the criminal cases were made in a CBC television news program.

Moran was charged with impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test. Later, a third charge of dangerous driving was laid. Unlike the first two charges, dangerous driving does not carry a mandatory penalty.

The two more serious charges were dropped, Moran pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and received an unconditional discharge, meaning he received no penalty. The Crown did not appeal.

Lucas said in a telephone interview from Grand Forks that the way the investigation of the CBC's allegations was handled has left Kootenay residents wondering whether there is a different kind of justice for a well-known lawyer and another kind for others.

The least the attorney-general's department could do would be to go to Soldier a match for enemy tank?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A revolutionary new weapons system based on radio waves will allow a single infantryman to detect and destroy a tank one mile away, the defence department's chief of research said in an interview published today.

William J. Perry told the Washington Post the detector system is as important as the development of the airplane and radar and "will change the face of battle."

He said the system can be in the field near the end of the decade and will offset the Soviet Union's vastly superior tank force.

"What I'm giving you is not a fantasy," Perry said. "The question is not whether. The question is when."

He said "millimetre wave components" did not exist five years ago but have since been successfully tested by the Pentagon.

The key part of the weaponry is a detector system using a tiny antenna to locate tanks by radio waves bouncing off metal. The antenna is placed in the nose of a missile, bomb or artillery shell and tied into a computer the size of a package of cigarettes.

The antenna-computer system guides the missile or bomb to the armor — a tank or surface vessel.

"A single footsoldier can stand up against a tank" with the weapon, Perry told the newspaper. "He just has to aim it in the direction of the tank or cloud of smoke surrounding it."

He said the missile "flies over the tank, then this little wave sensor searches for it, finds it and destroys it."

The system can overcome metal decoys thrown out by the enemy and can be used in all weather and in the darkness.

Perry said because of the United States' lead in minature components it is five years ahead of the Soviet Union in the weaponry.

Service set for sea captain

A memorial service will be held Sunday for George McCandless of Sidney, one of the area's best-known sea captains, who died Wednesday at 69.

The service will be at 3 p.m. in the Chapel of First Memorial Services, 4725 Falaise Drive.

McCandless was captain of the Uchuck which operated a mail, freight and passenger service from Port Alberni to Bamfield and Ucluelet.

McCandless and the Uchuck, which he owned in partnership with Esson Young, were familiar to tourists and residents.

Charged woman out on bail

A Victoria woman charged with attempting to rob a bank in Duncan was released on a $2,000 surety bond after appearing in provincial court Friday.

The court ordered Mary Rita Hall, 53, of no fixed address, to return next Friday for election of trial method and plea.

Duncan RCMP said a woman entered the Bank of Montreal on Station Road shortly before noon Thursday and handed a teller a note which read: "This is a holdup. Give me all the money and keep quiet."

Two plainclothes RCMP constables, Hal Zech and Ken Handy, happened to be in the bank at the time on other business, and when the alarm was sounded walked over to the woman and arrested her.

Rescuers jittery

The Pacific Rescue Centre here was jittery overnight after word was reached that a 721-foot ore carrier was experiencing mechanical difficulties in the same area another ore carrier capsized Christmas Day with the loss of 30 lives.

A spokesman said a pilot was dispatched to the Yasukawa Maru after it reported it had dropped anchor near Triple Island, about 50 kilometres west of Prince Rupert.

But a subsequent report indicated the problem was believed to be minor.

The vessel was guided back into Prince Rupert for inspection this morning.

The spokesman said if it is determined repairs are needed the ship will be brought to Vancouver or Victoria.

The Panamanian-registered Lee Wang Zin capsized Dec. 25 after apparently running onto Celestial Reef off the northern tip of Queen Charlotte Islands about 40 kilometresfurther west of Triple Island. Only two bodies of the 30 Taiwanese crew were recovered.

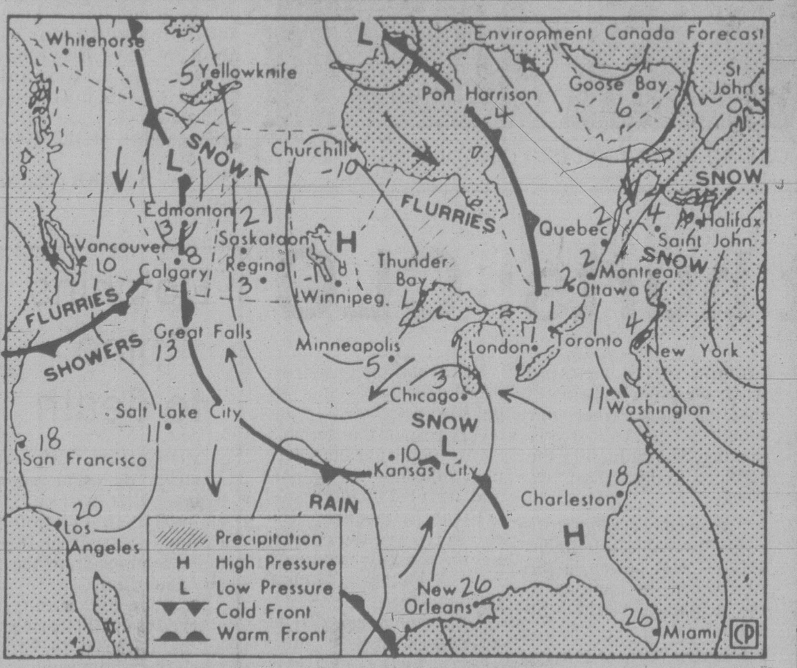

Map valid until noon Sunday

A series of frontal waves moving onto the Alaskan panhandle will give periods of rain to the north coast over the next few days. The systems will weaken as they move southeastward across the province giving only spotty precipitation to southern regions. The first system will cross southwestern portions of B.C. tonight with the next spreading cloud and rain onto the north coast Sunday morning.

Belgrade on defensive

Times News Services

BELGRADE — Yugoslavia blasted the Soviet Union Friday for "insulting" press attacks on the country, comparing then to the "propaganda war" of 1948 that signalled President Josip Broz Tito's break with the Soviet bloc.

Tito, two months short of his 88th birthday, still lay in "very grave" condition today at a hospital in the northwest city of Ljubljana, fighting heart and kidney failure, internal bleeding, pneumonia and fever.

There have been many speculations that the Soviets might try to get Yugoslavia back into its fold — or at least keep it from shifting closer to the west — after Tito dies.

The first official reaction in Belgrade to anti-Yugoslav articles that appeared recently in Vietnamese and Soviet publications came in a sharp statement by Foreign Ministry spokesman Mirko Kalezic.

Meanwhile, the U.S. government is reported to have slashed red tape so Tito can be treated with an experimental drug, moxalactan.

Moxalactan is an anti-biotic not yet licensed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Pressures increase for reform of roe industry

By MIKE HUGHES

Methods used in the B.C. roe herring fishery are too destructive and will have to be changed.

That's the word from the federal fisheries department as the curtain comes down slowly on this year's disastrous season.

More money will be added to the research budget and a hard look taken at ways to catch the spawning herring without damaging the grounds.

It's a pledge the fishermen and fishboat owners have heard before and the kind of action they've sought for the last couple of years.

The department has also been told in the past to crack down on the licensing system as too many "moonlighters" are involved.

Wayne Shinners, director of field services for the fisheries department, says this has been a turn-around year.

"All those involved, the federal government, processors, seiners and gillnetters know now that we can't continue to run the herring roe fishery as we did in 1979.

". . . if we are to have a fishery next year it is going to be radically different that what took place in '80 and '79 . . .

"That gold rush fever, that mad dash with 1,300 gillnetters and 249 seiners chasing small pockets of fish, we can't allow that to continue."

He suggests that maybe the gillnetters will have to sacrifice the higher quality roe in order to protect the spawning grounds.

Methods of limiting the amount of fishing gear will have to be examined.

More research has to be done, he says. Under $1 million was allotted last year and that will be doubled in the next budget.

Louiz Souza, secretary manager of the Fishing Vessel Owners Association, says his group has been calling for this kind of action for years.

He said when Japanese technicians came over to observe the fishery about seven years ago, they warned that if the gillnetters continued to fish right on the spawning grounds the fishery would only last six or seven years.

There has been poor management all along, he says, adding that it may now be too late to save the resource.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union accuses the fisheries department of managing the resource to maximize profits for the processors regardless of the consequences.

Business manager Bill Procopation says the union told fisheries last year that protection of the herring stocks was the main concern.

If that meant not opening the season this year, that should be done.

Procopation says the catch this year supports the contention that the fishery should never have been opened.

He said it's "a damn disgrace" that even though only one-third of the quota was taken in the southern waters, fisheries continues to open small pockets in the north.

Mike Burgess, executive secretary of the Fisheries Association of B.C., says he's not as alarmed about the stocks situation as the union appears to be.

There is a definite change in the spawning pattern but this could be due to water currents or some other natural factor.

The association, which represents 14 fishing companies, would like to see more research into the fishery.

Ted Miller, MP for Nanaimo-Alberni and the NDP's fisheries critic, has called for a public inquiry into the management and ownership aspects of the industry.

The validity of the concern has been driven home during the current season, which began March 2, as the expected stocks of herring didn't show up on some of the major spawning grounds.

Only one-third of the expected quota of 30,000 herring was taken in the southern waters. Barkley Sound on the west coast of Vancouver Island, heavily fished in past years, never opened.

A strike by union fishermen limited the number of fish that were taken in some areas like around Denman Island where a heavy spawn was recorded. But industry observers are still concerned about an apparent change in herring behavior.

Opinions on the future of the fishery vary from those who think there won't be one next year to those who feel there will but with a lot of changes.

There is also debate on whether the stocks are depleted or the herring have just moved to different areas. Some feel the numbers are still there but there are just more younger fish mingling with the older ones.

Others say the fault lies with the test fishermen who don't have the experience to find the herring and determine the proper catch period.

In many ways it was the 1979 season which pushed the industry to the brink it is teetering on today.

Prices paid for the 40,500 tons taken last year averaged $3,200 a ton and soared as high as $5,000.

This heightened the mad scramble and more damage than usual was done to the spawning grounds.

The big money also led to the collapse of the roe market in Japan.

Although prices for the herring looked good during the '79 season those who benefited were living in a fool's paradise.

Japanese consumers who buy the roe eventually balked at having to pay as much as $45 a pound for what is considered a delicacy in that country.

That boycott coupled with a fear about the cancer-causing qualities of a roe-bleaching process brought the market crashing down.

A dispute over just how low the price for the herring would have to go this year led to a strike by about 30 per cent of the herring fishermen.

As it turned out the strike was a fortuitous one as the fisheries department has closed the major fishing grounds with only 10,153 tons of herring caught in the southern area. The predicted catch limit was 30,000.

If the entire fleet of 1,550 had been available, fisheries likely wouldn't have been able to open the season at all because there were too few fish.

The area north of Cape Caution, off the norrthern tip of Vancouver Island, is still being assessed with small areas being fished.

The expected catch limit for the north was 5,000 tons but the fisheries department admits that many herring won't likely show up.

So far, 1,322 tons have been taken in the north and the fishery is likely to continue for a couple of weeks.

Last year, the over-all quota was set at 59,300 tons and only 40,581 tons were caught.

A steady drop over the past three years in the number of herring showing up on the major spawning grounds worried some parties involved prior to this year's fishery.

There were calls for tougher management from the fisheries department as well as pleas for more research into the effect of the fishing gear on the spawning grounds and the apparent changing behavior of the herring.

But the only major change this season was a regulation reducing the number of gillnets allowed per licence to one from two.

Fishermen say even that restriction was abused with some gillnetters setting two nets.

Captive released

ROME (Reuter) — A Rome fashion shop owner, kidnapped more than two months ago, was released on the outskirts of Rome late Wednesday, police said. Carlo Teichner, 30, was abducted by three men who hit him with pistol butts and bundled him into a waiting car as he left his shop Jan. 12.

Boom-to-bust slide for fishermen and packers

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's fishing industry is in the doldrums — becalmed by slumping sales, high debts, over-expansion and a dwindling foreign market.

For the packing companies and workers this will mean layoffs, lower production and plummeting profits.

The slide follows a boom in the industry. Gordon Safarik, manager of Ocean Fisheries Ltd., one of about 10 large companies which account for 75 per cent of B.C.'s fishing fleet, says B.C. fishermen were among the world's highest paid last year.

But the bubble has burst and fishing is in a world-wide recession that he says has been caused by:

— A glut of fish on markets resulting from high foreign demand, improved harvesting methods and the 200-mile limit, which helped local fishermen.

— More fishermen. The number of salmon seiners rose to 550 from 250 in six years; the number of fish companies to 100 from 10 major companies 20 years ago.

— Overcapitalization. The boom inspired many people in the industry to spend money for improvements on boats and equipment. Now B.C.'s fishing fleet is too large and efficient for the current depressed market.

— Foreign competition. U.S. fishermen are underselling their Canadian competitors, and Japan, Norway and Denmark are relying less on imports, having improved their own fisheries.

— Consumer boycott in Japan. The Japanese are refusing to pay retail prices for B.C. herring roe, which last year reached $60 a kilogram in the shops.

Salmon exports are also affected because the Japanese have expanded their own salmon fishery and are buying cheaper Alaska salmon to supplement their needs.

The cloud's dark lining

The B.C. government's bank account is booming because of royalties on forest products exported to the U.S. and profits made on exported natural gas. The two accounted for about $600 million of surplus revenue in the current fiscal year.

These resource revenues are widely considered to be a boon to the province's economy, but now an economist is warning that this may not be the case.

Michael Walker, director of the economically conservative Fraser Institute, warns that overdependence on resource royalties can lessen the accountability of a government, and lure citizens into too many high-cost programs.

He believes the trend towards increasing reliance on resource revenues is now so pronounced in B.C. that the Social Credit government may be able to abolish the sales tax.

That doesn't mean, however, that the money now raised through sales taxes has disappeared from the B.C. budget. It just means it has been transferred to a different form of taxation — resource taxation.

The institute noted that in the budget, the government went so far as to say: "Budgetary revenue has grown from $3.5 billion in 1976-77 to an estimated $5.5 billion for 1979-80 . . . despite substantial tax reductions in the last two budgets."

This is simply not so. All government revenue is tax money of one sort or another, be it collected from individuals or corporations, at the federal, provincial or municipal level. The government meant only that levels of taxes had been reduced in specific cases because other areas — notably resource revenues — were picking up the slack.

In B.C. last year, the province collected about $480 per capita in B.C. in oil resource and forestry resource royalties.

Walker's argument is that this money makes the cost of government artifically low to British Columbians. In such circumstances, citizens tend to demand more government than they really can afford because the costs are hidden. It is obvious that this could cause problems later if the resource base dried up, something quite likely to happen with natural gas being used up and forestry always prone to suffer from the cyclical vagaries of the market.

Also, Walker says, the government tends to be less accountable with resource revenue monies. This was obvious during the current fiscal year in B.C. The cabinet authorized the spending of more than $400 million, virtually all of it from unexpected resource revenues, without taking its plans for the money to the legislature at all. The more predictable nature of direct, personal tax levies makes it much more difficult for the government to find unbudgeted money from them.

It takes an economist to point out that every silver cloud, like resource revenues, can have a dark lining.

Coaches: the critical agent

By Bruce Howe

Physical activity is generally accepted as a basic requirement for the adequate development of children. Even as a fetus within the womb, the individual moves to express his needs and desires.

This behavior increases from birth and as the child grows, movement becomes a primary agent for exploring the expanding environment. In addition it provides a means for self-understanding, enjoyment, and interaction with other individuals.

It has been demonstrated that play is the means by which the child learns to be flexible in a highly complicated society. In similar vein, other researchers consider that children's play reflects the level of sophistication of adult society and provides a good preparation in life skills without threat of failure.

Play important

While most authorities agree that play is important, others have argued that organized sport has similar advantages for our children.

It can be conceded that sport does contribute to physiological and motor development, but there is less certainty about the claimed psychological benefits. These usually include the following: (a) improving self-esteem; (b) building character; (c) developing emotional stability; (d) improving respect for others; and (e) controlling aggression.

However, even a cursory look at some of our sports programs places these outcomes in doubt: spectators, usually parents, who jeer at the attempts of young children on the soccer fields, coaches who abuse their team members, and young competitors who demonstrate violent behaviour in minor hockey programs. In fact, research in sport behavior has supported the position that organized sport is at least as likely to increase aggression, create dependency, produce anxiety, and reduce self-esteem as any of the positive effects.

Despite these rather depressing results, it is still possible for sport to be an agent for positive psychological development.

The critical agent is the coach who acts as a significant figure in the child's life and becomes a primary reinforcer of behavior. He, therefore, provides the source of much of the young athletes' values and beliefs about themselves.

This is a problem when the coaches are frequently untrained, with conflicting motivations for their participation in sport. Research has demonstrated that children participate for three major reasons: to gain a feeling of achievement, to associate with friends, and to have fun.

In contrast, coaches are most primarily win-oriented. The drive to win has been observed as the most frequent reason for children to drop out from sport, sometimes through a direct action by the coach, but more frequently through the subtly approaches of not allowing children to take part sufficiently or creating high pressure programs.

There are several measures that need to be taken to make it possible for more complete benefits to be obtained: Primarily these revolve around the need for practicing coaches to be as well prepared as possible.

The Coaching Association of Canada has recently revised its program and produced an excellent certification scheme. All sports bodies should make the Level I requirements mandatory for coaches of children's sport.

Abandon playoffs

A secondary aim is to convert the adult-modelled structures which are now in place. In this regard, leagues should be de-emphasized, play-offs abandoned, awards made more appropriate, and seasons shortened so that the child is able to attempt more activities both inside and outside of sport.

Finally, the role of the coach should revolve around the teaching of skills and concern for the health and safety of the participants. To accomplish this, rules should be amended to insist that games are scaled to the age level of the group and that the children who wish to play are able to do so at their personal physical and skill levels.

The broadcasting honey pot

OTTAWA — One of the great con games of communications in Canada will begin next week when 300 groups start appearing before the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) to argue the whys, the why nots, the by whoms, the for whoms and the hows of pay-television.

Three years ago, then-Communications Minister, now Commons Speaker Jeanne Sauve pronounced pay-TV "inevitable." The CRTC decided, then, that she was wrong.

Pay-TV is back with us, as a subject for debate. It's been brought before us sideways. A long-planned CRTC hearing on the use of satellites to extend communications services into remote regions has been transformed, under pressure from the industry, into a combined hearing on satellites and pay-TV.

Tenuous tie

The tie between the two is tenuous. Satellites can be used to distribute pay-TV signals (and just about anything else) and are, of course, the only way to bring high-quality communications to isolated communities. Yet pay-TV is an urban phenomenon, and a commercial one; services to remote communities are a social and a political problem.

In its brief to the CRTC, the Canadian Cable Television Association justified connecting the two on the grounds that, "Extending conventional TV services to isolated communities depends largely on the introduction of a pay-TV service." Profits from the pay-TV system would be used to cross-subsidize the otherwise-uneconomic extension of conventional TV to the fringes of the country.

This is a case example of mising apples and oranges or of putting the cart before the horse, or of doing both.

TV service in rural areas is inadequate because governments haven't faced up to their responsibilities.

Pay-TV thus is attractive to governments (hence the endless federal-provincial squabbling about it) because it offers them the chance to limit its budget expenditures while someone else foots the bill for upgrading remote service.

That someone — surprise, surprise — is you, the consumer.

Each subscriber to Pay-TV is free to subscribe or not to. Everyone who does, therefore, has no right to complain, other than about the quality of programming.

But both those who subscribe and those who don't still will pay indirectly for Pay-TV. In the U.S., the only real international example of working Pay-TV systems, these systems have siphoned off programs from the established networks — almost-new films; sports spectaculars — by outbidding them.

The additional competition drives up the price. Either conventional broadcasters win the auction for the distribution rights, and have to jack up their rates to advertisers who pass the buck on th consumers, or the Pay-TV systems win and charge subscribers for the privilege of seeing programs that they can now see for "free" on the existing TV networks.

The CBC, in its joint application with CTV and with the Quebec private network, TVA, for a Pay-TV licence, claims this "siphoning" couldn't happen with its proposed system since the broadcasters themselves will own it.

Yet the CBC brief does admit that to be profitable, its system would have to carry "a substantial number of American movies." The CBC doesn't say where these will come from, nor how, once the system is operating, anyone will be able to tell which films would normally have run on the networks.

Questionable

Whether we need Pay-TV at all is questionable. Already, we view a greater variety of TV programs than any people anywhere; indeed, many of us view a wider variety of American programs than do many Americans.

This, though, is another question. For the present, the CRTC should slice its hearing into two quite separate subjects. The quality of services in remote areas, which is the responsibility of governments and of licensed broadcasters and cable-TV operators, few of whom actually are starving. Pay-TV, which is something quite else, and as well the honey pot on which everyone wants to clasp their sticky fingers. Those who believe they won't pay — twice — no doubt believe still in the free lunch.

Shadow government

Since Canada held its series of regional elections to elect a national government on Feb. 18, questions have been asked about representation from the West.

The Liberals, after all, elected just two members west of Lake of the Woods. The two came on a grand tour of the rest of the West, seeking input from defeated Liberal candidates. After all that, one of the two actually made it into the cabinet. Three senators were added to the cabinet to give a token show of Western representation. But westerners — most of whom don't trust any Liberal an inch farther than they can throw him anyway — remain uncertain as to how, on a day-to-day basis, the system will function. Who will be there to deal with concerns that affect only the prairies or B.C.?

British Columbians interested in these questions may, it appears, get some hints as to the answer by watching their own provincial government. To a degree, the situation between Vancouver Island and the rest of B.C. is a microcosm of the situation between the west and the rest of Canada.

In the 1979 election, the Social Credit party won only two seats on the Island — Oak Bay, and Saanich and the Islands. The other nine seats went solidly NDP. It's interesting to note that had the same proportion prevailed in the rest of the province, the NDP would have formed the government with 46 seats; the Socreds would have been reduced to a rump opposition of 11.

The situation was quite reversed in other parts of the province, however, and the Socreds returned to power. Premier Bennett now had to deal with a Vancouver Island on which the Socreds were significantly under-represented, based on province-wide figures. It's worthwhile examining how he has done it.

First, and most obviously, he has put both Islanders — Hugh Curtis and Brian Smith — in the cabinet. He was fortunate in that the two Island MLAs are both skilled and reliable politicians who have proved to be assets to the government.

Second, he has the unquestionable advantage that the capital itself is located on the Island. This means a constant government presence — and a constant supply of cabinet ministers to spread the government message where possible or necessary.

Third, and most interesting, however, he has developed close links with the Island through a series of appointments, projects and negotiations involving philosophic friends of the government — free enterprisers, businessmen, and prominent Social Crediters.

Nowhere is this more obvious than in Victoria itself. The two-member riding is represented by two NDP members, but have they been involved in any of the major provincial projects or services of importance to the riding — the conference centre, the Crystal Gardens, the future of the Princess Marguerite, the general ferry service, the new jetfoils? Not a bit of it. On each of those projects — all of which are subsidized or underwritten by the provincial government — the local input has been provided by the loose group of shadow Socreds.

The new Island representatives on the B.C. Ferries board are Mike Young (former mayor and defeated Victoria Socred candidate) and Ald. Bob Wright (who is not an official Socred, but has been seen at Socred meetings). Wright is also the Victoria representative on the B.C Steamships board.

The conference centre and Crystal Gardens will, it is expected, be managed by the Pan-Pacific Society, the board of directors of which bears a striking resemblance to the executive (with a few additions from past executives) of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce. The directors of Operation Jetfoil (which is probably also going to take over the Maggie) include most of the same group.

Similar examples can doubtless be found up-Island, particularly around such projects as Duke Point industrial development in Nanaimo.

This system of shadow government has both advantages and disadvantages. It does ensure direct representation to government from areas lacking government MLAs. Wright and the Chamber of Commerce group have doubtless ensured that the government paid more attention to the Island than it otherwise would have.

The disadvantage is that the shadow group can acquire significant amounts of political power (as has been the case in Victoria) without having any accountability. Public money will be spent on each Victoria project, but the group(s) managing them are not accountable to the taxpayers of this area.

But when the defeated federal Liberal candidates begin to be appointed as the Western representatives to this board and that commission, remember — you saw it first right here in Victoria.

A public craziness

BOSTON — He was a Sixties Burn-out, they said. The man was Wasted.

The people who knew Dennis Sweeney talked about him in terms we seem to reserve for druggies and former movement people. Burnt-out. Wasted.

They talked about him as one of the thousands who spent the Sixties mainlining idealism, and spent their 20s getting high on activism.

They talked about him as if he were one of the people who get hooked on a movement — its community, its rhetoric, its anger and hope, its speed — and after withdrawal has nothing left. Burnt-out. Wasted.

Dennis Sweeney met Al Lowenstein when the student was 20 and the mentor was 34. He was arrested for shooting him when Sweeney was 37 and wasted and Lowenstein was 51 and still an activist.

It was surely private craziness that pulled that trigger, the craziness of a man who was afraid of the fillings in his teeth. But it was also public craziness.

"In a sense he was a paradigm for a lot of young people who took part in the civil rights movement, then became radicalized," said an old friend from Stanford. "They became permanently alienated and were lost to us, just as surely as those who were killed in Vietnam."

There is a generation of people in the U.S. who went through their youth believing that, as Conrad once said, "An ideal is often but a flaming vision of reality." Now they live in a world in which idealism is smothered with protestations of practicality.

The survivors of the sixties range from the burn-outs to the cop-outs, from the crazed to the co-opted, from the strugglers to the serene. But we are just now beginning to see again the continuing effects of the era so many of us classify as past.

Suddenly sixties' people have become a subject again. Marge Piercy's new book, Vida, is a human description of life in the movement in the '70s when it had been reduced to a small band of radicals limping their way across the landscape.

The main male in Margaret Atwood's new book, Life Before Man, is a stock figure from the Alternative Movement, the lawyer-turned-carpenter, revisited. Without much joy or income, he makes wooden toys which only the rich can afford. In Ann Beattie's writings, we have, one after another, collections of disconnected, disoriented, affectless, wandering exiles of the time. The bean-sprouted children who seem unable to grow up.

The cast of Sixties' Survivors has other familiar characters. The ones who rejected their ideal of change for 1980 "realism."

The others who left storefront action groups, talking about the "need to move on" and melting into law firms. The ones who occasionally feel nostalgic with Bob Dylan and Pete Seeger records. The ones who occasionally feel guilty.

And, of course, the Al Lowensteins, those who keep putting one foot in front of the other, who cannot abandon injustice as a priority. Those who keep pushing for a better world, while others turn to talk of private schools, and go to work on their tenure or their "heads." Those who dedicate their lives to making one difference at a time.

Every passionate conflict, between peoples, between ideals, between social visions, creates its immediate victims and its wounded. And its lifelong effects. It seems that we are just now separating out the survivors, the walking wounded of that frenzied era, the commonality of many who have lived through the same vast social movements.

Lowenstein and Sweeney began on the same side and were bitterly estranged by the furies of time and of the mind. Sweeney was a casualty of that struggle and Lowenstein the victim of this final injustice.

A few years ago he expressed his worry about Sweeney: "What I'm saying about it is that if you understand all that (the sixties lived at its most intense), there isn't any way you can underestimate the reasonableness of going crazy.

"It was a very sad sort of end to a very talented person that hacked out the fillings in his teeth because he said the CIA would use the fillings to damage his brain. He just simply had gotten to the point where I don't know if there was any way he could be reclaimed from this tragedy."

It is no comfort, but Allard Lowenstein understood.

B.C. has mined forests instead of farming them

Crisis in the woods

It's too late to halt over-cutting

By ROBERT WILLIAMSON

The Globe and Mail

The city of Prince George is one of the richest communities in Canada, thanks to the forests that feed its pulp and saw mills.

A civic monument salutes the explorers, who couldn't see the future for the trees: "They sought furs and the far Pacific, but found their fortune in the waiting forests."

For 20 years, responsible foresters have been sounding cautions about the folly of this next-valley mentality of a powerful, voracious industry which has piggy-backed the province to prosperity.

Suddenly, at last, the horizons have been defined.

Some popular logging districts in British Columbia will start running short of trees in five to 10 years. A harsh new reality of limits to growth is dawning. Victoria appears to be taking the first halting steps into the long-heralded era of intensive forestry management.

"British Columbia will not run out of trees," Forests Minister Tom Waterland says soothingly. Then adds in a classic of semantics: "But not all of these trees can be harvested and processed at a profit."

He is staking his political career on a $1.4 billion, five-year budget (promising real growth in spending of 5.3 per cent a year) just wheedled out of the cabinet in a belated drive to tend the dwindling forests.

Roughly half the entire province is classified as productive forest land. However, that base is to be slashed by 25 per cent over the next 20 years, mostly because chunks of it are too costly to log, environmental restraints, new farms and urban sprawl.

The industry, historically as short-sighted as big industries anywhere can be, is still profiting largely from the bigger, older trees, contemporaries of those selected for spars by Captain Cook 200 years ago. Its challenge is to make the transition to second-growth forests.

There's little cheer in a $1 million inventory just finished by Victoria. A booming industry, founded on expansion, is going to have to accept that the way of the future is contraction.

Statistics show there aren't enough trees to sustain current levels of cutting much longer. In fact, the forecast is that the cut should be slashed by 39 per cent in most of the province over the next 100 years — an indictment of neglect. And that has to be reconciled with a projected jump in wood use of 30 per cent over the next 20 years (pursuing appealing short-term profits from soaring demand would trigger a calamitous collapse within 30 years in some regions).

A million logged hectares may remain unsatisfactorily restocked, but what has the industry in a lather is that it may remain shut out of 4.7 million hectares of environmental reserve.

Significantly, the biggest single item in the new, $1.4 billion plan is $88 million a year for continued harvesting at current rates fixed in 1977.

Victoria has decided to maintain the rate for five years, buying time with the industry and unions while it thinks out an approach to alternative harvesting rates. This is in the face of its own figures, which suggest an immediate winding down to the lower, sustainable levels.

Politicians have no stomach for what they call "significant economic and social dislocations" of trying to reduce the rate now. Forestry means 10 per cent of the B.C. work force, a $2 billion payroll and $575 million in provincial revenues.

So Victoria has opted to burn the candle at both ends a while longer.

Critics are dubious of the government's concocted scenario that has its vaunted revolution in management, utilization and fire and bug protection greatly cushioning the inevitable crunch 30 to 50 years hence — although even that still allows for a lasting 10 per cent harvest reduction.

Second- and third-largest items in the forestry program are for basic and intensive silviculture, which will grow from a combined $70 million last year to $103 million in 1984. Much of it is to raise and plant more than 100 million seedlings a year. Despite warnings and programs dating back 70 years (ample time to have had new forests well established), British Columbia has never come close to closing the regeneration gap.

The industry has been given notice of dramatic adjustments to be made. Execution of Victoria's plan is everything now.

A hint of the scope of the challenge comes from the rows of empty seats in the University of British Columbia's faculty of forestry, begging for students who remain unconvinced of any bright future in the waiting forests.

Running airports

In 1977, Otto Lang, then Minister of Transport, announced "the formation of a Task Force on Airport Management to study the feasibility of a new administrative and management structure for 24 principal airports across Canada."

This task force continued under Transport Minister Don Mazankowski, and is to present the final report to Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin by the end of this month.

In summary, the task force has determined the best means (in their view) of managing Canadian airports lies in the concept of an Airport Authority at each airport.

While trying to sell this pre-determined concept to the municipalities, the provinces, the carriers and various interest groups, the task force emphasized the local autonomy approach. However, we have now learned local autonomy means to the task force:

(a) The airport manager will have more decision-making authority than at present;
(b) The employees of an airport authority would not be public servants;
(c) The middle levels of the decision-making process would disappear; and
(d) "Local autonomy" does not mean municipalities or provinces will be part of the decision-making process.

Further, the task force, in a progress report issued in July, 1979, stated the airport authority "would be an additional buffer between the public and the minister."

How blatant they must be before someone takes them to task for this attempt at obfuscation!

In my firm opinion, this is simply a sleight-of-hand attempt to show the theories of "Proposition 13" being adopted by Transport Canada.

My goodness, won't the minister look good when he can show a large decrease, on paper, in the expenditures of his department and a very large decrease in the number of public servants? Santa Claus really is alive and lives in Ottawa.

I sincerely hope some of your reporters will take enough time to expose this hoax for what it is. Yes, I am a public servant, but I am also —

1. A Canadian
2. A taxpayer
3. A reasonably intelligent person who does not like being fooled!

—William E. Freifield, National President, Union of Canadian Transport Employees.

Government's job

The March 10 letter by Dr. W. L. Orr, in which it is suggested that funds for the Langwood workshop could easily be raised by passing the hat in local pubs is of interest. However, even if the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped was inclined to raise funds in the manner suggested, we would be prevented from doing so because as a member agency of the United Way, we have agreed not to conduct public fund-raising campaigns for operating funds.

Dr. Orr's letter is somewhat disturbing to us since it suggests fund-raising methods which require the exploitation of handicapped people. We believe, in the case of Langwood, that the workers there ought to have the service provided to them as a right of citizenship, rather than have it dependent on the charitable impulses of Victoria's citizens, those in pubs or otherwise.

Clearly, there is a place for charity. The activities of our association are already contributed to substantially by local residents through their contribution to the United Way campaign each year. We suggest, however, that the provision of basic services for handicapped citizens is, quite properly, the role of government to which we all contribute. — W. Ralph Vipond, Executive Director, Capital Regional Association for the Mentally Handicapped.

Good turns

Christmas is now long past, and our Hydro transit bus drivers have done many good turns to the public before and since. However, a certain bus driver performed for us the good turn that made our Christmas.

We are an elderly couple and on our way to church on Christmas morning our car stalled at the corner of Richardson and Cook, and I could not get it started. Just then a South Fairfield bus drew up to board a passenger. The driver, noticing our dilemma, left his bus, ran over to our car and called out: "I know your make of car and I know just what it needs to get it started; let me try to help." This he did!

As a Boy Scout for over 30 years I have experienced a great many different good turns, but for us this bus driver had voluntarily offered the good turn that made our Christmas.

Thank you, bus driver! — R.I.T. Thompson, 408—1060 Pakington Street.

Heritage theatre

I understand City Hall has given Famous Players permission to demolish the Capitol Theatre.

It makes one wonder where City Hall's sense of value lies, when you think of a lot of the old houses that they have declared heritage and not worth looking at and are saved for posterity, while a building like the Capitol with its fine interior must come down. Not a word from the Heritage Committee.

If this is their way of thinking, it makes me wonder about my place. Maybe I was wrong trying to save it (Higgins' Hall) but I thought it had a nice interior if restored. Recently a decision by city hall and the fire department if carried out would have wrecked the whole interior.

So it looks like interiors of buildings don't mean much to city hall.

Now if the Capitol was designated a heritage building we would have something to be proud of in years to come. — C. Rudolph, 1501 Fort Street.

Get lost

In a recent letter, Mr. Owens (Sign needed, March 11) deplores the refusal of Saanich to allow erection of a directional sign at a street intersection. This municipality also seems opposed to adequate, or any, street signs at main traffic-light controlled intersections.

Mr. Owens' experience is just another example of the attitude of Saanich municipal authorities towards the travelling public, which appears to be purely and simply "get lost." — D. B. Lorimer, 2876 Wyndeatt Avenue.

Royal shifts jobs from Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank plans to transfer 100 jobs in its systems development department from Montreal to Toronto this summer, a spokesman for the bank said.

"We're plagued with vacancies," the spokesman said, explaining that recruitment of skilled people from other parts of the country has been difficult because people don't want to move to Montreal.

About 1,200 people now work at the systems development department in Montreal, where the bank has its head office.

Earlier this week, Canadian Marconi Co., also blamed continuing difficulties in attracting skilled people to Montreal for the firm's decision to concentrate future expansion in Ottawa rather than here.

NDP queries miss mark: Socred

Canadian Press

The NDP has been so ineffective in the legislature's question period that members of the governing Social Credit party might start asking their own questions, says party whip George Mussallem.

The 15-minute question period which leads off each day's sitting is one of the few chances the Opposition has to publicly query the government on daily issues. Otherwise, they usually have to wait until a minister's budgetary estimates are being debated.

After getting government approval to double its research staff budget, the NDP was expected to give Social Credit a hard time but the opposition party has looked unprepared at times. It has also asked questions of the wrong ministers and asked other questions for which answers were already known.

"There's no question period, you might as well forget it," Mussallem said in an interview.

The government is not making it easy for the NDP. Ministers are playing smug and some — Energy Minister Bob McClelland in particular — have ridiculed NDP MLAs for their questions. Other ministers follow Attorney-General Allan Williams' practice of giving a simple yes or no.

Earlier in the week, Stu Leggatt (NDP — Coquitlam-Moody) asked Health Minister Rafe Mair a question on pharmacare before being told by jeering government members that it should have been directed to Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy.

Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) asked McClelland if action had been taken to extend a mining moratorium in a wilderness area.

McClelland said the extension had already been passed by a cabinet order, which is public, adding "I'm continually surprised at the lack of knowledge about the public business of British Columbia."

Earlier, Emery Barnes (NDP — Vancouver Centre) asked the government if it planned to reinstitute rent controls. Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen replied the controls still apply to most rental units in B.C.

In other cases, wording of questions has resulted in Speaker Harvey Schroeder ruling them out of order.

"There's no questions," said Mussallem. "As a matter of fact in our caucus, we've been discussing the Alberta system that the government members should arrange questions.

"We've been discussing that because they (the NDP) haven't got any questions. If they don't get the question period going very soon, you'll find questions coming from the government benches."

NDP leader Dave Barrett rejected suggestions that his party is unprepared, saying it often has its hands tied by ministers who take questions as notice, meaning they will answer them later.

"Some of the ministers are good," he said. "Some of the ministers get up, are up front and answer questions."

"Other ministers just refuse to answer questions and just sit there."

Last week, Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) accused Williams of playing cute with question period after he stickhandled around probing questions about allegations deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel influenced the outcome of three criminal cases.

Barrett also said the media might be overlooking some of the things said in question period while waiting for a dramatic exchange.

"Some of the most dramatic things that have happened in my experience in the legislature are often things that have been quietly overlooked and then it's like a fuse on a time bomb. It blows up much later."

"I think if anybody goes into the legislature with a preconceived notion of high drama every question period, then they're completely wrong."

Virginity at 20 thing of past

LONDON (AP) — Five out of six British girls have lost their virginity by the time they leave their teens, a study by Hull University lecturer Robert Chester indicates.

The study, published in 19, a magazine widely read by British teenage girls, also found that only 54 per cent of girls age 16 or under said they were virgins.

Social Credit misnamed?

A Social Credit backbencher complained Friday that the provincial government is not following party doctrine and he sees nothing wrong with changing its name.

Jack Davis, MLA for Capilano, told the legislature he doesn't know why the party is called Social Credit when it has never followed the doctrine laid down by its one its founders, Major Clifford Douglas.

Former premier W.A.C. Bennett was a conservative, said Davis, and his son, Premier Bill Bennett is following the same policies.

Davis also said the provincial government has not properly studied Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan's constitutional proposals. If it had, he said, it would realize Ryan is more difficult than Premier Rene Levesque, whose Parti Quebecois advocates Quebec separation from Canada.

Rafe Mair, government spokesman on constitutional matters, said Ryan's proposals are a blueprint of those drafted by B.C.

Businesses must work for tax aid

Downtown businesses will have to get directly involved in the revitalization of their areas to take advantage of a new $25-million program planned by the provincial government.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday that under the program downtown organizations will get taxation powers similar to those accorded an association of landowners to promote the resort municipality of Whistler as an international ski resort.

Vander Zalm said impetus for the revitalization programs will have to come from the merchants and people directly affected.

The Downtown Revitalization Act is expected to go before the legislature shortly after Easter. Vander Zalm said it will involve low-interest loans from a $25-million revolving fund.

Under the plan, municipalities will be able to set up special committees to work on downtown heritage restoration and renovations in conjunction with municipal councils.

Other projects could include ornamental sidewalks, streetlights, bikeways and parks.

Funds also will help municipalities develop a theme such as Kimberley's Bavarian-style buildings or the Spanish decor in Osoyoos.

Vander Zalm said the new act will empower the business community in a downtown area to collect funds for projects.

He noted that tenants in shopping centres are required to sign agreements with the centre owners that they will take part in promotion campaigns and pay a portion of the costs.

"Those opportunities are not available to the small-business community in the downtown core, and that's what we really have there — small business people," he said.

"The act would provide a means to that end. It would give them an opportunity to do things more collectively."

Foster family honored

The Foster Family of the Year will be announced and honored at a reception sponsored by the human resources ministry Tuesday.

The award — part of the ministry's parent encouragement program — will be presented by Helen Patenaude, president of the B.C. Council For the Family.

The reception will be held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel, 1175 Beach Drive, at 7:30 p.m.

Ted gets response and Canucks fall

By Canadian Press

Ted Lindsay got the response he wanted Friday night after the general manager of Detroit Red Wings fired coach Bobby Kromm in Vancouver before a National Hockey League game against the Canucks.

Lindsay replaced Kromm with two co-coaches — himself and Marcel Pronovost — and the Red Wing players responded with a 5-2 victory

Pronovost, hired just March 1 to be the team's defensive coach, was behind the bench for the win which ended a five-game Detroit winless string and also halted Vancouver's three-game unbeaten streak.

"Teddy (Lindsay) and I are cut of the same wood," said Pronovost about his former Detroit clubmate, "because we played together and know what winning is all about.

"We played a lot better tonight because the players decided they were going to work. All I did was change the lines. They did all the work and should get all the credit for winning."

Victory moved the Wings into a 15th-place tie with Vancouver and Washington Capitals in the over-all NHL standings, a point ahead of the charging Edmonton Oilers. Sixteen of 21 teams will make the playoffs.

Elsewhere Friday, Edmonton thumped Pittsburgh Penguins 9-2, Hartford Whalers tied Philadelphia Flyers 5-5, Winnipeg Jets upset New York Rangers 4-2 and Minnesota North Stars edged Washington 4-3.

"The days of just one coach in the NHL are over because now it takes two coaches to keep the players busy," Pronovost, 49, said. "I didn't know what the tension in the dressing room before the game would lead to, but it seems the players wanted to play for me.

"The players didn't talk about Bobby (Kromm) as far as I know. It's a touchy question right now."

Kromm, 51, was coach-of-the-year in the NHL two years ago when, in his second season at Detroit, he led the Red Wings to a second-place finish in their division and their first playoff berth in eight years.

Wing captain Dale McCourt was openly critical of Kromm earlier this week when he said the coach's so-called open-door policy to the players really didn't exist. Detroit owner Bruce Norris told Lindsay to straighten out the situation immediately and Kromm was told of his demise Friday morning before practice in Vancouver.

"It's one of the most difficult things I've ever had to do," Lindsay said. "I personally like Bobby Kromm, but sometimes the chemistry isn't right."

McCourt refused to talk about the coaching change after the game, in which he scored his 27th goal of the season and assisted on the 34th by rookie Mike Foligno, who broke McCourt's team record for goals by a first-year player.

Vaclav Nedomansky scored twice for Detroit and winger George Lyle got the other, while Thomas Gradin and Dave Williams replied for Vancouver.

The outstanding players for Detroit were defenceman Reed Larson and goalkeeper Rogie Vachon as the Canucks outshot the Wings 40-32 in the wide-open game.

Larson assisted on three goals and made numerous key defensive plays, while Vachon was steady in goal, making the big saves when needed.

"We played three consistent periods and that was the difference," Vachon said. "I decided to concentrate on the game and forget about everything else.

"There was a good feeling in the dressing room and we took advantage of our scoring chances and they didn't. They had lots of chances."

McCourt also said the difference was in the goaltending because Glen Hanlon of the Canucks "seemed to be fighting the puck all night on his glove side" and let in a couple of soft goals.

Coach Harry Neale of the Canucks also praised Vachon, but said it was "unfair to criticize Hanlon because he's played many super games for us all season."

"We played one of our better games this season and came away with nothing," he said. "Sometimes it happens that way when you run into a hot goaltender."

Wayne Gretzky scored three goals for the Oilers and picked up an assist to give him 45 goals and a league-leading 76 assists for 121 points — just five back of scoring leader Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings.

Gretzky still has a chance of winning the scoring championship and the Oilers picked up two badly-needed points in their search for a playoff spot.

Tom McCarthy and Curt Giles scored in the third period to give Minnesota the win in Landover, Md. Tim Young and Kent-Erik Andersson also scored for the North Stars, who won their fourth game in a row. Ryan Walter, Rolf Endberg and Pierre Bouchard scored for the Capitals.

Rick MacLeish's goal with three minutes left in the game enabled Philadelphia to salvage a tie in Hartford, Conn. The lead changed hands five times before MacLeish, on a breakaway, tied it for the last time.

A new-look Sandown with glass and class

It will take a while, but Sandown Park is due for a spanking new look.

And that "new look" may just be worth waiting for since it will include a new grandstand, a half-mile oval, night racing and perhaps — in time — year-round racing.

First step was completed recently when North Saanich council threw its support behind a proposal by Orangeville Raceway Ltd., which leases the track for standardbred racing, to construct a new concrete and steel grandstand in place of the present wooden structure.

The council backing came in form of an approval of an application under the Agricultural Land Commission Act for the construction of the grandstand. Because the track is within the Agricultural Land Reserve, Sandown owners first had to receive approval of council and the B.C. Land Commission.

In the application, Goodwood Park Ltd. and Colwood Park Association Ltd., owners of the racetrack property, said that Orangeville Raceway, which has a lease on Sandown until 1997, will undertake the renovations.

These include:

- The eventual replacement of all existing facilities with modern, attractive permanent buildings;
- Development of a one-half mile length of track for standardbreds on the infield and within the perimeter and confines of the existing five-eighths track which will be used for thoroughbreds;
- Replacement of the existing track surface;
- Installation of lighting facilities for night racing;
- Construction of a small trailer park behind the barn area for horsemen having horses racing at the track;
- The eventual replacement of existing barn facilities and enlargement of existing stable capacity;
- And possible expansion of clubhouse and grandstand in the future depending on fan support.

Orangeville Raceway is the umbrella organization for Cloverdale and Sandown standardbred racing, and first operated at Sandown in 1978 after starting at Cloverdale in 1976.

The Cloverdale operation has been an outstanding success, with fan support and mutuel totals increasing tremendously each season. A new grandstand was constructed at Cloverdale last summer.

While the two seasons at Sandown have not been that rewarding, the interest shown prompted Raceway officials to press for improvements and also to push for year-round racing.

It has long been the opinion of president Jim Keeling that if the Sandown facilities weren't upgraded by 1981 it would be doubtful if racing could continue.

It was pointed out by Orangeville Raceway in the application that, by moving to Sandown in '78, it undertook a major commitment, both with respect to capital expenditure and the long-term future of the racing industry in B.C. and that continued use of the property requires the complete rebuilding of all existing facilites.

The new grandstand will be enclosed by glass on the east and west sides with the clubhouse completely glass enclosed. There will also be expanded concession areas in the downstairs lounge and in the clubhouse on the upper level.

Full course meals will be available and it is hoped that a full liquor licence may be obtained when the facility is completed.

Each of the separate areas of the grandstand will have wagering and cashiers' wickets while expanded closed-circuit television will provide replays of the races.

The new half-mile track (which is the norm for harness racing) will enable the standardbreds and thoroughbreds to have exclusive use of their own racing surfaces.

As it is now, track surfaces must be changed with the start of each season, at a heavy cost, because harness horses require a different type of surface than the one used for thoroughbreds.

I know, you can hardly wait.

Still with work to do, Whitecaps clip Selects

By MAX LOW

Disappointment was probably the most universal emotion shared by the 3,000 fans who flocked to Royal Athletic Park Friday night to get this season's first glimpse of their soccer heroes of last year — the Vancouver Whitecaps.

Sure enough, the 'Caps took control of the sixth annual Victoria Cup soccer game and defeated the younger and more inexperienced Vancouver Island League Selects 2-0. But, though both goals came close to being classics, the game left much to be desired in the entertainment line and the Vancouver squad looked only a feint shadow of the side that captured the pro North American League's 1979 Soccer Bowl title.

That's because it was only a shadow with four players — John Craven, Bobby Lenarduzzi, Buzz Parsons and Victoria-born Bob Bolitho — the only Whitecaps playing who saw regular duty last season.

Add to them three or four high-priced recent signings who haven't got over the jet lag and settled in yet and a few youngsters from the reserve team the management wants to take another look at and you've got a mishmash that at times struggled to overcome the zeal of a nervous group of players drawn from first-division clubs on the Island.

Ray Hankin, reportedly bought from Leeds United for some $800,000 to replace "King" Kevin Hector, did score a fine goal with a hard blast after a pass from winger Gerry Gray to give the Whitecaps a 1-0 half-time lead but, far from looking nimble-footed, most of the time lumbered around like a second-row forward in a rugby game!

And Hankin was more than admirably marked by the Island's very promising defender Dan Van Gylswyck who, if anybody was to be so chosen, was the player-of-the-game.

Backed up well by right back Kim Blank and left back Ray Telford, Van Gylswyck broke up several dangerous attacks and gave young goalkeeper Steve Akam a lot of support.

Making his debut in an Island Select team, Akam made some brilliant diving saves in the first half, stopping a hard shot after a breakaway by Buzz Parsons and then brilliantly turning aside a header by winger Mark Nickias.

He was beaten only twice — by Hankin with his first goal and then by Nickias who headed in a corner kick taken by Gerry Gray early in the second half.

Backup goalie Jon Iruretagoyena, who replaced Akam for the last 30 minutes of the game, had to make a terrific save on another hard shot by Hankin just after he'd taken over.

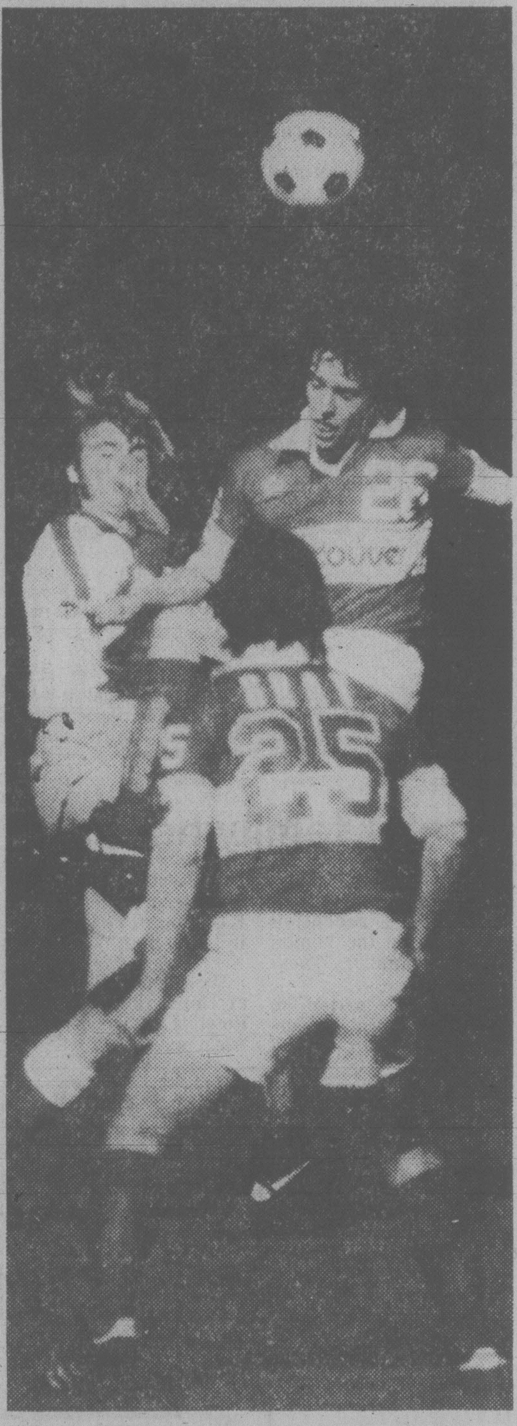
Unfortunately, though, it wasn't until the dying minutes of the game that the local forwards started to believe it would be possible for them to score a goal. Before that, they'd been happy enough to keep the Whitecaps out and the score respectable.

Then came a couple of good runs down the wing by Bobby Duncan and some clever footwork inside by Frank Woods but, alas, it was all too late and of little avail.

And that was a pity because the man the fans really wanted to see in action — goalkeeper Dave Harvey, signed also from Leeds United to replace that idol of the crowd last year Phil Parkes — didn't have anything to do.

Without the pressure of league standings or a Soccer Bowl at stake, of course, this kind of game rarely produces the standard or the style of soccer we all hope to be seeing from the Whitecaps this summer.

But, with only a week left before their NASL opener, I'd say they still have quite a bit of work to do.



FIRST WITH HEAD is Rolston Dunlop (26) of Vancouver Whitecaps during soccer match Friday night at Royal Athletic Park. While clubmate Gerry Gray (25) watches, Dunlop beats Dan Van Gylswyk of Vancouver Island selects to ball. Whitecaps were quicker to ball on many other occasions and retained possession of Victoria Cup with 2-0 victory over Selects. (Ian McKain photo)

Milford stays on

VANCOUVER (CP) — The sparkle in Jake Milford's eyes is a reflection of the excitement the general manager feels from his Vancouver Canucks, long the whipping boys of the National Hockey League.

Milford is 63 years old and there has been speculation he would step down from the day-to-day operations of the Canucks. Those rumors were laid to rest Friday by Milford himself.

"I've been talking about retirement since 1952," he said with a laugh. "But I've got a strong feeling about this club and it's been decided that my contract will be extended for another season."

Rumors of Milford's expected retirement were rekindled in January when Milford met with other NHL general managers in Florida on league business. A Toronto newspaper reported that Milford would retire and present Vancouver coach Harry Neale would become g.m., with assistant coach Dave Dunn taking over as head man behind the bench.

"I met recently with Frank Griffiths (chairman of the team) and we agreed that all of us should stay together for at least another year. He gave me a one-year extension on my contract with the Canucks," said Milford.

Milford feels strongly about the future of the Canucks, who are in the midst of a late drive for a playoff position. Vancouver is nine points ahead of its pace of a year ago.

"We need Harry (Neale) behind the bench right now," he said. "Harry has another year on his contract, and so does Dunn. I want them to be here as this team gets better.

"I said all along that I wouldn't stay on with this job if things didn't get better. Well, I think we've improved this season, especially in the last six weeks. We've played well this season against the best clubs."

Shupe counts on hot Tigers

Portland Winter Hawks lead Victoria by three points and play their remaining two games at home, but Cougar coach Jack Shupe refuses to give up the ghost.

As long as the mathematical possibility exists, Shupe isn't yielding on the chance that the Cougars still can pull off first place in the Western Hockey League's Western Division.

He feels the key may turn, one way or the other, tonight.

Portland is home to the Medicine Hat Tigers while Cougars entertain New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena.

"Medicine Hat's capable of beating the Hawks in Portland," said Shupe.

"And if the Tigers do that, Portland will be walking on egg shells Monday against Seattle (the Hawks' final game), especially if we win our last two."

Cougars wind up their 72-game regular season Sunday in Seattle.

Working on Victoria's behalf is a Seattle club that has caught fire in recent weeks. The Breakers, thanks to Joe Ward's goal at 8:37 in overtime, edged Medicine Hat 4-3 in one of three games Friday. It was the Seattle club's seventh victory in its last nine games.

Shupe has called up 17-year-old Wayne Prestage, an affiliate with Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior League, for the final two games. Prestage will fill in for right winger Bob Smith.

Smith injured his shoulder Wednesday in Portland. First feared it may be a broken collar bone, the injury was diagnosed as a bad bruise. It means Smith will be available when the Cougars open the playoffs next Saturday.

Prestage will return home after the weekend.

In other games Friday, Lethbridge Broncos protected their two-point hold on the last playoff spot in the Eastern Division with a crucial 5-5 tie against Saskatoon Blades while Brandon Wheat Kings clinched fifth place by upsetting Regina Pats 4-3.

Gervin's extra effort too much for Pacers

Old nemesis George Gervin and surprising Kevin Restani provided the offensive spark Friday night as the ailing San Antonio Spurs continued on their winning ways Friday.

Gervin scored 41 points and Restani added a career-high 24 to lead the Spurs to their fourth consecutive National Basketball Association victory — a 116-109 win over Indiana Pacers.

"With three guys out, we knew we needed an extra effort," said Gervin, who earlier this season scored 54 points against the Pacers in Indianapolis.

The Spurs played without the services of regulars Larry Kenon, James Silas and John Shumate, all nursing ailments.

Elsewhere Friday night, Denver Nuggets subdued Chicago Bulls 134-128 in triple overtime, Seattle SuperSonics defeated San Diego Clippers 107-104, Atlanta Hawks dumped Detroit Detroit Pistons 108-95, MilwaukeeBucks whipped Golden State Warriors 121-93, Kansas City Kings edged Utah Jazz 102-98, Phoenix Suns beat Portland Trail Blazers 111-100 and Philadelphia '76ers downed New Jersey Nets 108-99.

The weekend in sports

Hockey tonight and a choice of soccer, rugby and field hockey Sunday round out the options open to Victoria-area sports enthusiasts for the final portion of this weekend. There is also a wide variety of sports on television for those who prefer to avoid the March winds and enjoy watching the athletic action at home.

TONIGHT

For hockey fans there is the chance to see Victoria Cougars' last home league game of the season when the Cats take on the New Westminster Bruins at 8:30 at Memorial Arena.

SUNDAY

Soccer takes over on many of the City's parks as the Vancouver Island League hopes for better weather for an opportunity to make up a host of previously-cancelled contests.

In the first division, Castaways play Vic West at Blanshard Field, Athletics meet Gorge at Heywood, Royals take on Oak Bay at Topaz Park and Nanaimo United and Powell River play in Nanaimo.

Second-division matchups have Labatts playing Prospect Lake at Central Park, Royals meeting Oak Bay at Bullen Park and Vic West playing Da Vinci and Duncan against Vantreights, both at Henderson Park. Nanaimo City plays Port Alberni in Nanaimo.

In the third division, Cordova Bay and Lakehill meet at Lochside Park while Victoria Athletics travel to play in Campbell River.

Royals play Duncan at Riverside Park in Duncan in the only fourth-division game and in division five championship cup matches, Saanich plays Cordova Bay at Cedar Hill and Prairie Inn plays Port Alberni up Island. And in the fifth-division consolation cup match, Duncan meets Castaways at Carnarvon Park.

All matches are scheduled to start at 2:15 p.m.

There is also a Juvenile Soccer inter-district Provincial Cup playdown match at Henderson Park at 1 p.m. when Victoria Lakehill Radicons play Richmond Royal Insurance Royals in the third division.

The only rugby scheduled is in the third division with Castaways and Vampires playing at Belmont High School, James Bay meeting Royal Roads out at the military college and Velox taking on Agrarians at Layritz Park, all at 1 p.m., and Cowichan playing the Ebb Tide at Macdonald Park at 2:30.

In men's field hockey, Pirates play Oak Bay at Oak Bay High School, Tigers 11 meet Rebels 111 at Beacon Hill Park and Rebels 11 take on Castaways at Windsor Park, all at 11 a.m. Then at 1:30 p.m., there's the long-awaited Rebels 1 versus Tigers 1 game at Windsor Park and UVic plays Castaways at the university.

'Fun day' at Sawgrass

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — They came staggering in from the course windblown, bedraggled and weary.

"Another fun day at Sawgrass," said Tom Watson, tongue firmly planted in cheek.

"It was the kind of day you couldn't expect to have many good breaks," said Hale Irwin.

"I scrambled and scratched and clawed and did everything I could to shoot 73," added Steve Melnyk. "It just wasn't much fun out there."

But the howling winds that have become a trademark for the Tournament Players Championship subsided a little late in the day and Curtis Strange took full advantage of it.

The 25-year-old Strange, whose only Professional Golfers' Association victory came last fall in Pensacola, Fla., birdied his last two holes to tie Irwin for the second-round lead Friday in the event that is billed as the annual championship of golf's touring players. Irwin had a par round of 72 and called it "a good score, excellent."

A series of rain squalls halted play for more than one hour. And it was followed by winds gusting in excess of 50 kilometres an hour, winds strong enough to topple the portable toilets scattered over the course for the spectators' convenience.

"We were laughing about it," said Watson. But that was one of the few giggles anyone found all day long.

"It was a day that tested your patience," Watson added. "It left you a little bit weary."

Tenpinners will get the first shots at Times Bowler-of-the-Year titles

Tenpinners will take the first shots at cash and glory in the 17th annual Bowler-of-the-Year rollofs.

Winners of weekly awards in the tenpin section of the annual, 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest hit the boards at Mayfair Lanes on Sunday, April 27, at 1 p.m. in their scramble for rolloff titles. Fivepinners step on the rolloff stage one week later — Sunday, May 4 — at Town and Country Lanes, also at 1 p.m.

Rolloff winners in each of the contest's four divisions — women's and men's tenpins, men's and women's fivepins — will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will receive a bonus award of $150. Bowling fees for rolloff contestants will be shared equally by the lanes involved and the Times.

All winners of weekly awards in the current Bowler-of-the-Week competition, which is open to all those competing in league play on Southern Vancouver Island, are eligible for the rolloffs.

Latest to join the rolloff qualifiers are Agnes Gummer and Ken Preston, who topped the fivepinners during the 22nd week while rolling at Town and Country.

Preston flirted with perfection on his way to a whopping 950 series in the Wednesday Major League. Ken blasted the pins for 416 in his second game and added scores of 236 and 298. Agnes started with 310 and followed with counts of 244 and 253 for an 807 total in the Friday Niters League.

Extra-end decision does it for Canada

PERTH, Scotland (CP) — Marj Mitchell's Regina rink won the women's world curling championship today with a 7-6, extra-end victory over Sweden, skipped by Elizabeth Hogstrom.

Canada advanced to the final with a 9-4 semi-final victory over Scotland this morning. Sweden moved into the final with a 9-5 victory over the United States, represented by Sharon Kozai of Seattle.

Today's playoffs were settled Friday when the Canadians and the Swedes won their final games in the 10-team round-robin tournament to finish with identical 8-1 records. Scotland finished third at 7-2 and the U.S. took fourth with a 5-4 record. Italy also had a 5-4 record, but the U.S. took advantage of Italian mistakes to win the tie-breaker 10-5.

Canada easily defeated Norway 10-1 Friday and Sweden hammered Germany 15-7. Scotland defeated the U.S. 8-6. The U.S. loss, coupled with Italy's 9-5 win over Denmark, created the fourth-place tie.

The Canadians had no trouble with the Norwegian rink Friday and, except for a sixth-end shot when skip Ellen Gitmark of Norway prevented Canada from counting four, it was just practice for the Mitchell rink.

Stenmark gets 'B' pro license

Times News Services

Alpine superstar Ingemar Stenmark has decided to turn professional but will stick to the World Cup circuit, the Swedish Ski Federation said Friday in Stockholm.

Stenmark, 24, chose to compete with a so called B-license instead of joining the U.S. pro skiing circuit. The B-license allows a skier to accept advertising money and compete in the white circuit except for Olympic competition. It was created by the International Ski Federation several years ago.

The Swedish Federation, knowing it had no choice, quickly decided to issue a B-license for Stenmark rather than risk his chosing a U.S. career.

Arne Jagmo, SSF president, said: "He has done so much for Alpine skiing in Sweden that we couldn't refuse him."

In Squaw Valley, Calif., Peter Monod of Banff won the U.S. giant slalom championship by beating out Steve Mahre of the U.S.

Monod, 21, led in both heats in a combined time of two minutes 24.30 seconds to top a field of 122.

Second place went to Mahre, 22, in 2:24.95 while Carey Adgate, took third in 2:25.34. Phil Mahre, Steve's twin brother, posted a disappointing 2:26.00.

City quartet takes trophy

A Victoria rink skipped by Gord Hooey and including Bill Purdy, Hank Graas and Gus Reid has captured the Guy Philp Trophy, emblematic of the Pacific Coast Curling Association's over-60 men's title.

The Victorians topped three other zone winners in a double-knockout competition that wound up Friday at Vancouver Arbutus.

All four zone winners, however, will participate in the provincial tournament at Kelowna next week.

McCubbin 'tough' but Jim not afraid

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Jim Dunstone's rink from Winnipeg had the day off today and sat back and watched the three teams still left in the scramble for the right to meet him in the championship game Sunday at the Canadian mixed curling championships.

But Dunstone, who finished round-robin play with a 9-2 record, has no one to cheer for. He says Bob McCubbin of Richmond, who takes his second-place B.C. rink into a semi-final today, is tough, but so are the St. John's and Charlottetown rinks who had to play off for the right to play McCubbin, 8-3.

Dunstone beat all three during play in the 12-team event.

Split decision

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Chacon, his nose smashed and blood streaming from both eyes, scored a 10-round split decision Friday night over Rafael (Bazooka)' Limon and another shot at the World Boxing Council super featherweight championship.

A test of survival for women golfers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — How bad was it? It was so bad, so cold, so wet and so windy that Jo Ann Washam was quite happy to shoot 76. It was so bad that Hollis Stacy said her hands were like ice blocks.

Stacy was one of the fortunate players in Friday's second round of the $200,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association national pro-am event — she started early and almost completed her round before the winds began gusting to 70 kilometres an hour, the rain started falling and the temperature abruptly dropped to 50 degrees.

She fired a second-round 72 after an opening-round 70 to grab a two-stroke lead at the midway point of the 72-hole tournament, as Washam's 76 — after a 68 Thursday — put her in second place.

Only four players, all early starters, were able to better par during the second round.

Seventy-three players, including Canadians Sandra Post and Cathy Sherk, made the cut for the final two rounds, which came at 13-over-par 157 — highest on the LPGA tour this year.

Series opens here Monday

First game in a four-game exhibition men's basketball series between the Canadian national team and the Abbotsford-based Athletes in Action will be played Monday night at 8 p.m. in the University of Victoria's McKinnon Gymnasium.

Under coach Jack Donahue, the Canadian men's team placed fourth in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal and has its eyes set firmly on a medal this summer in Moscow. Athletes in Action have compiled an impressive 77-9 win-loss record against top university sides in the United States and Canada.

The second game between the two sides will be at the University of British Columbia on Tuesday. The third game is in Edmonton Thursday and the series ends next Friday in Calgary.

Meanwhile, in Winnipeg, New Brunswick and B.C. will meet tonight to determine the Canadian senior women's champions.

B.C. earned a berth in the final by defeating Manitoba 59-55 in one semi-final Friday. Former Victorian Angie Dobie and Joanne Sargent each netted 22 points for the winners. Angie Straub scored 16 points and Kathy Dubesky 14 for Manitoba.

New Brunswick won the other semi-final by downing Alberta 70-61.

In other action Friday, Saskatchewan took seventh place by thrashing Newfoundland 88-46 as Heather Witzel scored 16 points.

Overtime setback for Leafs

PORT ALBERNI — Esquimalt Maple Leafs hope to do it the hard way.

The South Island Big Six League champions bowed 3-2 in overtime to Port Alberni Friday in the opening game of their best-of-three series for the Vancouver Island intermediate hockey championship.

Leafs must sweep games today and Sunday if they hope to advance to the provincial Coy Cup semi-finals.

Bill Ransom's goal at 7:40 in overtime provided Alberni with its victory. George Shiner and Howie Hewitt also counted for Alberni while Murray McLaren and Bill Adkin scored for Esquimalt.

In another quarter-final series opener, netminder Charlie Briskham stopped 37 shots, including a penalty shot, to power Vernon Cougars to a 6-0 victory over Burnaby Lakers.

Sockeyes force series to limit

RICHMOND — Brad Rand scored three goals to lead Richmond Sockeyes to an 8-4 B.C. Junior Hockey League win over Nanaimo Clippers before 950 fans Friday to deadlock their best-of-seven semi-final 3-3 and force a deciding game tonight in Nanaimo.

Winners meet Penticton Knights in the league final.

Nanaimo marksmen were Dave Wheeldon, Rick Siemens, Gerry Bogle and John Newberry.

Midget hockey clinic

Sixty of the top midget-aged hockey players in British Columbia will be invited to participate this summer in a specialized training program sponsored by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association.

The B.C. Junior Olympic Hockey Program will provide an eight-day, in-depth training experience for players aged 15 and 16 at the University of B.C. under the leadership of top international, professional and university coaches and players, said Dave Andrews of Victoria, provincial development co-ordinator for the BCAHA.

Andrews said the project, Aug. 2 to 9, will feature daily three-hour on-ice sessions designed to improve individual skill levels and team-play understanding, plus off-ice lectures on leadership, nutrition, conditioning and alternatives available to players in their future development.

Games success

WHITEHORSE (CP) — Arctic Winter Games officials say they could have a surplus of $150,000 when the games end Sunday.

Owens said the surplus can be attributed to the generosity of the business community and the government and to the games volunteers who found ways to have work done free.

External services revised

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a consolidation of Canada's foreign service, catching some external services by surprise.

The prime minister said in a statement that the senior levels of the external affairs department, the trade department and the immigration department will be integrated.

Additionally, the foreign services of the immigration department would be merged with those of external affairs.

People working abroad for the Canadian International Development Agency — the Canadian aid agency — would be given a chance to become members of the external affairs department.

For the people who deal with Canadian foreign affairs officials the change is purely technical. There appears to be no change in services offered abroad by embassies and no change in basic operations of the various departments in Ottawa.

But a managerial committee will decide on which member of which department is best suited for a specific foreign affairs posts. Not all of Canada's top official abroad are external affairs officials. Ken Taylor, the ambassador in Tehran who helped six Americans leave Iran, is a trade department official.

Spokesmen for the department said technicalities of the reorganization still must be worked out.

Trudeau is following the recommendations of Barry Steers, former Canadian consul-general in New York.

Loto-Sexe busted

MONTREAL (CP) — Police have arrested 15 city men and women in connection with the operation of an illegal lottery with a difference.

"Loto-Sexe" — in which winning holders of a $2 ticket had the choice of a night in a hotel with free food, liquor and the company of two young prostitutes, or $400 in cash — lasted only six weeks, a Montreal police spokesman said Friday night.

But it netted its operators several thousand dollars, he said, adding that police were not yet sure of the amount.

St. Jean and wife back home

Prize vacation turns sour

OTTAWA (CP) — A western Quebec man who spent four days in a Mexican jail after being accused of stealing a wallet wants Canadians to boycott Acapulco to protest Mexico's "guilty-until-proven-innocent" policy.

Gilles St.-Jean of Touraine, was released from an Acapulco jail earlier this week after being jailed during a one-week vacation won by he and his wife Lorraine.

St.-Jean said Friday that although he was released for "lack of proof," he was forced to pay $800 in bribes to police, guards, courts staff and the judge and another $400 to a lawyer. He also paid a private detective in Montreal to help get him out of Mexico.

He was arrested March 12 — three days after his arrival at the holiday resort — after being accused by a hotel manager of stealing a wallet containing $300 from an American woman.

Police, who told him he was guilty of the theft because a guide saw him do it, took him to a jail where he was placed in a small cell with 19 others.

After talking with the Canadian vice-consul in Acapulco, St.-Jean was given a lawyer and moved to a larger jail to serve a mandatory three-day term.

He said he was given no food for 24 hours and was only able to eat in the second jail when an American prisoner lent him money to pay for food.

His wife flew home March 16 because she was afraid she would also be arrested. St.-Jean followed after his release on March 18.

"Sixty per cent of the tourists down there are Canadians but nobody seems to care how you're treated," he said in an interview.

Lalonde sees gas up 16¢ a year

OTTAWA (UPC) — Motorists can look forward to annual increases of 13 cents a gallon at the gas pump over the next four years, federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde says.

But the increases, smaller than those proposed by the defeated Conservatives, may be achieved by placating the Alberta government during negotiations over domestic oil pricing with federal approval to allow the province to export more natural gas to the United States.

Lalonde, in an interview to be broadcast Sunday on CBC-TV, predicted "very tough and arduous" negotiations with Alberta.

The Liberal cabinet minister said he expected to be able to negotiate an increase in the barrel price this year which would be less than $4, and under the $4.50-a-barrel increase for the following three years, which were the price hikes proposed by the defeated Conservative government last year.

In order to satisfy the government of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, which has stated it will not tolerate an arrangement offering less than that of the Conservatives, Lalonde said it might be possible to give Alberta the approval to make more exports of natural gas.

The federal energy minister said, however, such approval would be conditional upon American commitment to completing the northern gas pipeline to Alaska.

Lalonde is due to meet with U.S. Secretary of Energy Charles Duncan next week in Ottawa to discuss the fate of the pipeline.

He said U.S. President Jimmy Carter last week received a letter from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau "stressing to the American authorities the importance the government of Canada attaches to the realization of that particular project."

If the U.S. decision is to abandon the project, Lalonde added, the Canadian government would then make a "full reassessment" of its export arrangements.

"What we must know from the Americans is whether they're really serious about this project," Lalonde said.

"If they tell us that they have abandoned it and they don't intend to realize it, obviously we will have to go through a full reassessment of the whole situation."

If the U.S. says the project remains a very high priority and will proceed, then "it's another ball game," he said.

But Canada is entitled to know very soon, if not Monday, where the Americans stand.

Lalonde admitted that his willingness to export more natural gas goes against the feelings of some of his Liberal colleagues.

But he said the party has not said there should be no natural gas exports and added that the previous Liberal administration aided exports.

Bulbs for soldiers

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Each of the 33,000 known surviving Canadian soldiers who took part in the Second World War liberation of the Netherlands will be sent a package of tulip bulbs to commemorate the event, Dutch officials said today.

The gift will be part of Dutch celebrations marking the 35th anniversary of the freeing of the country from the occupying Nazis in 1945.

The Canadian veterans will receive the bulbs in September and the flowers — in the Dutch national color of orange — should bloom next spring.

One thousand former Canadian soldiers will visit the Netherlands in May to attend the anniversary celebrations. They will stay in Dutch homes and join the Dutch royal family at memorial services.

A polar-bear proof tent floor? That's called heritage protection

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Architect Martin Weaver meets problems in his career as a heritage preservation expert which architecture school never prepared him for.

For example, designing a polar bear-proof floor for a hut in the Canadian arctic.

Two years ago Weaver went with a team to Dealey Island off the south shore of Melville Island in the Arctic, to stabilize a shelter ravaged by the elements and the polar bears.

It had been built to house a cache of food and clothing left by one of the many rescue parties sent out to find the illustrious British explorer Sir John Franklin, whose 1845 expedition to the Canadian far north had vanished.

"That was a very interesting job," said Weaver.

Now director of technical services and education for Heritage Canada, the foundation concerned with preserving historic buildings, he came to Victoria recently for a workshop on preservation techniques sponsored by the University of Victoria.

The Arctic cold preserved everything so well that even 70 years later, members of Vilhaljmur Stefansson's expedition which happened on the cache could try on some of the uniforms and sample the tinned food. Both were still in good condition.

Most of the stuff was there when Weaver flew in two summers ago, although it had been pawed over by the bears and the canvas roof of the shelter had long ago caved in under the weight of winter snows.

The freeze-thaw cycle of more than a hundred winters and summers had encased everything in a block of ice. Inside the hut was one big chunk of supplies, 30 or 40 cubic metres of food and boots and winter clothing frozen into a mass.

The restoration team removed some items for the museum of the north at Yellowknife but left most of the goods intact after installing a strong floor in the hut. It had to be strong enough to take the weight of curious polar bears.

Weaver said they stand erect on their hind paws to reach higher. A beast weighing 1,000 pounds or more would place a stress three times greater than the load from a man of average weight and height.

So the floor had to be strong. That and other logistical details (how many four-by-eight sheets of plywood can you fit into a Twin Otter?) consumed more time than you'd think was necessary to stop a small falling-apart hut from deteriorating any further.

The work itself took four weeks, but it was a year in the planning, Weaver said.

It was a unique job in his experience, which includes work on excavation of Persian ruins thousands of years old and heritage buildings of more recent vintage in London, but the skills learned may be used at the other end of the globe.

WEAVER
. . . heritage specialist

The New Zealand government heard of the restoration job done at Dealey Island and a team of Canadians may be flying to Antarctica to advise on preservation of early explorers' camps in the New Zealand sector. Though the sites are separated by 10,000 miles, there are similar problems.

Weaver's present post at Heritage Canada is essentially one of promoting heritage preservation through educating professionals and the public.

The construction industry is going through a period of recession and recycling and restoring older buildings are becoming more significant in the business.

But they're coming up against a scarcity of individuals with the techniques and expertise to do the job well. Resource people like Weaver are in high demand for lectures and workshops all over the continent.

Heritage Canada is trying to encourage retraining programs so architects, engineers and builders can re-learn some of the old methods of construction.

Weaver said his experience has disproved the old saw that you can't get good workmen any more. Give a journeyman plasterer or carpenter some time with the old tools of his trade and he's soon duplicating the fine work of 19th century craftsmen.

"There's not the terrible shortage (of skilled workers) people thought," Weaver said.

"It doesn't take very long to pick up the skills."

A colleague runs a course in New York for the Cleaners and Caulkers Union, an offshoot of the Bricklayers Union, and the men show up after-hours for the voluntary course he teaches in treating old brick and masonry, said Weaver.

In Canada, the Canadian Labor Congress and the building trades unions are "highly receptive" to the idea, particularly since unemployment is so high in the construction industry.

It's only in the last two or three years that North Americans have started to shift significantly towards thinking favorably of conserving the old. Heritage preservation is more than sentiment — it makes sense in economic terms as well.

"If you keep an old building you do two things. You retain a quality of life that is more pleasant than living in a modern apartment. And you save a number of materials that are represented by that building," said Weaver.

Some heritage experts have developed a convincing tool — it takes the energy equivalent of a gallon of gasoline to produce five bricks, from digging up the clay to running the machinery which made them and baked them and delivered them to the building site.

You destroy an old building and that investment is lost forever.

Some politicians and senior civil servants are coming to accept this different view, but Weaver added:

"It's very difficult to push. Booming construction activity is a sign of a healthy economy. It takes an enormous amount of pressure to move into another course."

Computer cleaning navy's ears

A Victoria data-processing firm has won a defence contract to study distracting noise picked up by the navy's underwater listening devices.

Barrodale Computing Services Ltd. was given $10,448 to investigate a mathematical solution to the problem of flow noise caused by the rush of water past hydrophones.

Ian Barrodale said the phenomenon is similar to the windrush transmitted by a microphone used outdoors.

The Lord Chamberlain's Players

A PERSONAL LETTER FROM BARRY MORSE
FOUNDING ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

Dear Friend,

We are going to be neighbors!

No doubt you'll have heard of our plans to re-create Shakespeare's Globe Playhouse in Saanich on the outskirts of Victoria, British Columbia.

To all theatre lovers and theatre workers, the name of William Shakespeare is the most exciting and best loved in the world. In his working life as actor and playwright, Shakespeare was a member of a fellowship called the Lord Chamberlain's Players (hence the name of our group!). Shakespeare and his fellows went on to become the chosen entertainers at the Royal Court, so it's fitting that our Lieutenant-Governor, The Honorable Henry Bell-Irving, the representative of our Queen should also be our patron.

Shakespeare and the Lord Chamberlain's Players built, for their working home in 1599, the Globe Playhouse. It was there that many of Shakespeare's works — some of the greatest plays in history — were first produced. And it's a re-creation of this playhouse that we're now planning to build.

We are off to a flying start. We've already been granted a site by the Municipality of Saanich. It's a wonderfully located 7.7 acres (formerly the Maltwood estate) overlooking the Patricia Bay Highway.

I'm so enormously excited by this venture that I've become part of it, as Founding Artistic Director. I haven't been so enthused about anything since I served as Artistic Director in the early days of the Shaw Festival. Of course I'm proud to have seen that Festival and its neighbor in Stratford, Ontario, grow to international stature. But I can see no reason why something of equal standing should not exist here in the west.

As a Canadian artist I promise you that everything will be done to ensure that the quality of your Festival will be as much a source of pride to you as those other Festivals are to all Canadians.

Many benefits, both tangible and intangible, will come from this venture — in tourism, in education, and above all, in general pleasure.

We've already received the warmest interest and support from many quarters: your government, television and radio, and many newpapers and publications.

But what we need most is YOUR support; in interest and enthusiasm, of course, but you will understand that at the outset our need is for financial help towards the capital costs of launching The Globe.

Will you please be one of the friends of our playhouse?

I will personally thank you for a contribution of any size. Of course all contributions will be tax-deductible and you will receive a receipt for that purpose.

If you are able to make a contribution of $100 or more you will be enrolled as a Fellow of the Lord Chamberlain's Players and will receive a scroll honoring you as such.

I look forward eagerly to hearing from you and meeting you at "The Great Globe Itself" when our playhouse comes to life in 1981.

With heartiest thanks and good wishes,

Sincerely,

Barry Morse

'Jail him' judge's stand right: probation expert

An expert on probation services in Canada says a Vancouver judge was right in threatening probation officers with jail terms if they refuse to carry out his orders.

Dan Coughlan, former director of probation services in Ontario and chairman of the Ontario Parole Board, said in an interview here he is appalled by a probation officer's suggestion that a judge doesn't have jurisdiction over the handling of persons placed on probation.

The suggestion, made in Vancouver provincial court Tuesday, drew strong criticism from provincial court Judge Edmond Cronin.

The judge said probation officers have no authority other than that given them by the court.

"The judge is absolutely and perfectly correct," said Coughlan.

"It is utterly ridiculous for anyone to think otherwise."

He said probation officers are officers of the court and bound to follow whatever orders are set down for them.

"If the judge tells an officer to push a peanut with his nose down the main street at high noon, he has to do it."

There is one other option, he said — the officer can quit.

The 66-year-old Coughlan, who is writing a book on probation in Canada, called the case the ultimate example of permissiveness.

"The mistake was made when we started to hire people who have been trained in the new science of social work."

Coughlan — he has a master's degree in social work — said such officers regard themselves as professionals.

Some, however, may be deluded into thinking that just because they are professionals they have more authority than they have.

There is a tendency, he said, for some of them to regard their way of doing things as perhaps superior to that of a judge — a we-know-best mentality.

But Coughlan said a judge's order must be final and irrevocable.

"It can be questioned, but not in open court," he said.

He said the proper procedure is to discuss the case with the judge in chambers.

Failing that, the matter can be brought to the attention of the attorney-general.

Coughlan called social workers, members of one of those most dictatorial professions.

He said many social workers presuppose all criminals want to be rehabilitated.

"But the facts show that is not the case. The recidivism rate (number of criminals returning to jail) would indicate otherwise."

Overnight rash of accidents

City police traffic division had its hands full overnight with four downtown accidents.

Only one of the mishaps resulted in serious injury.

George Richard McIvor, 39, of 3411 Bethune, is in stable condition in Victoria General Hospital with multiple fractures and cuts received when his motorcycle collided with a car at Blanshard and Johnson about 11 p.m.

The driver of the car, Thomas Brandon of 1648 Wilmot Place, was not hurt.

Police said McIvor was thrown off his bike and landed about 75 feet away.

About $3,600 damage was done to the two vehciles.

Earlier in the evening four persons were sent to hospital following a two-car rear-end collision at Fisgard and Douglas caused when one of the vehicles stopped suddenly to let an emergency vehicle pass.

Police said the driver of one of the cars, Brian Bilotta, 22, of HMCS Yukon, was admitted to VGH with a possible concussion and head injuries. He is in stable condition.

A passenger in his car, Elizabeth Shelton, 27, address not known, the driver of the other car, Brian Allen, 25, of 301-254 Gorge, and Allen's passenger, Patricia Doonan, 24, address not known, were treated for minor cuts and bruises.

The mishap occurred at 9:13 p.m. and total damage is estimated at $7,000.

Police are looking for the drivers involved in two other single-vehicle accidents.

Both fled on foot, the first after his van struck a power pole at Douglas near Queens at 1:10 a.m., and the other after a stolen car rammed a parked car in the 600-block Francis at 1:48 a.m.

Police said the car had been stolen from Metro Toyota just moments before. A passerby nabbed a 15-year-old passenger who attempted to run off and held him until police arrived.

But the driver, also believed to be a 15-year-old boy, escaped.

Council to review Songhees plan

A comprehensive land-use proposal for the Songhees reserve will come before Victoria city council in April for discussion purposes, Ald. Bob Wright said Friday.

Wright, chairman of council's land-use committee, said the proposal would include housing, light industry and realignment of roads.

The proposals involve finding a solution to a major traffic bottleneck west of Johnson and for a continuation of the walkway around the harbor, west and south of Johnson St. Bridge.

The future of the E & N railway terminal and the oil tank farms on the 77-acre property will also be discussed.

The Airstep halter strap sandal for summer

At Eaton's, we call our new collection of Airstep sandals "street smart" for two very good reasons. First, they were designed with hot summer sidewalks in mind. All have open toes, halter straps and cool, built-in comfort. Second, they're a dressy shoe. The smart shoe for summer in the city. Equally at ease on Douglas Street, Fleet Street or Borbon Street. So, if you're looking for a shoe that gives you both style and comfort, take your first step to Eaton's and Airstep sandals. Sizes 5½-10.

Droege says he spent about 14 years in Toronto, learned the printing trade and came to Victoria to take a job with Capital Business Forms, 444 Williams.

He quit in November and, after a holiday in the Caribbean, went to the United States, touring the western and southern states on behalf of the KKK. He spent a week with Duke at the latter's home in Metaire, Louisiana, and spoke at a rally in New Orleans over Christmas. His appearance there generated puzzlement.

A Nashville, Tenn. newspaper reporter who has spent years investigating KKK activities contacted the Times in early January to ask who is this Droege fellow?

No one knew. Even his co-workers at the printing shop were surprised to learn of his involvement in the organization.

Said one: "He's the last person I would have thought of belonging to that group. He was so quiet. All he did was do his printing job — and he was extremely good at that."

Droege says he kept a low profile because he doesn't believe in mixing vocation with avocation.

But those days appear to be over.

Still the KKK isn't rich enough yet to provide him a salary.

As a stop-gap measure he says he's got a contract to do some tourist promotional work for a group in California.

What's he promoting? Travel in the Caribbean.

It's okay to work with other races, he says, just as long as you don't live with them.

Inuit are the gambling champs

ESKIMO POINT, N.W.T. (CP) — This hunting and trapping community of just under 1,000 may have more gamblers per capita than any other place in the country.

For about the past year, since prohibition dried up the Inuit settlement 1,200 kilometres north of Winnipeg on the shore of Hudson Bay, poker and pool have become favorite pastimes.

It's not penny ante stuff — thousands of dollars have been lost on a hand of cards and pool is often played for $100 a game.

"A friend and I went to Churchill (240 kilometres south) for a week on money we won," said a young Inuit pool player.

He said he knows people who have won enough to buy new snowmobiles, valued at about $2,300 here.

"I used to lose all the time. But now I'm doing pretty good." He pulled out a wad of $500 from his pocket to prove his point.

Town councillor Jose Kusugak said gambling has become a major problem in the community.

"You know someone who has a TV, radio, stereo and all that and one day you visit and it's all gone. He's been cleaned out, lost it all in a night's gambling."

Although pool games go until 4 a.m. with bets of up to $500 a time, the big money is wagered in poker games, said resident Billy Kuksuk. One local man recently offered his daughter as collateral on a hand.

"He lost everything and then he offered to put his two-year-old daughter up, but nobody would play him after that. Now that guy doesn't gamble anymore."

RCMP Cpl. Jerry Horsman said he has made no move to eliminate the practice.

"If there's a complaint I'll take action. Otherwise I leave it alone. My feeling is that this is their community and I'll keep the law they want."

Little of the money leaves the community anyway, Horsman added.

"One guy loses $300 and his TV one night, but the next week he's won it back. We're isolated here and it's not going anywhere. The money just goes round and round."

Courtroom monitor slams Vogel probe

the area and show there was no favoritism in the Moran case, he said.

Lucas said he wants a public inquiry into the matter — but, if that is considered too costly, the government should satisfy the people concerned with the three cases that "there aren't two different scales of justice."

He said he still has questions as to why no notice was given of the Moran case, which was not heard on a normal court day.

He said it was a matter of luck that a member of the justice council found out about the hearing but when she walked into the courtroom, she was given the impression she was not welcome.

Justice councils were established in all areas of the province by the former NDP government to monitor the operation of the justice system in their own areas.

Williams has said the serious charges in the Moran case did not go ahead because the local Crown prosecutor did not feel they could be supported by the evidence of witnesses and police. He said there was no interference by Vogel in the prosecutor's decision.

The other two cases of alleged interference by Vogel involved the dismissal of an impaired driving charge against a 17-year-old Vancouver youth and a decision not to call former chief justice John Farris as a witness in a prostitution case. Farris resigned when the case came to light but was not called as a witness because prostitute Wendy King pleaded guilty to keeping a common bawdy house.

The same day he was exonerated by Williams, Vogel said he intended to sue the CBC for libel.

On its Thursday night news, the CBC said it has responded to Vogel's demand "for an apology and a sum of money."

"Our regional director, Len Lauk, had this to say: 'We have examined our report and the statement issued by the attorney-general. We stand by our story and will defend any libel action.' "

Minister likes mortgage plan

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. said Friday he hopes to introduce a plan before mid-April to provide relief from rising mortgage interest rates.

Paul Cosgrove, who is also the federal public works minister, said he hopes to introduce the plan before Parliament opens April 14.

However, he said he can't make any firm commitments.

Cosgrove said he was enthusiastic about a mortgage rate reduction plan proposed by officials in Peel Region.

That plan would provide tax credits based on income and the difference between the rate of inflation and mortgage rates.

For example, a homeowner with a $30,000 mortgage and an annual income of less than $20,000 would receive a credit of $1,200 under the plan.

Cosgrove told a news conference he likes the plan in principle but has not had time to study it in detail.

"I hope to have some action, some relief before April 14. . .but I can't say today that there will be a program," the minister said. "It's not unlike a number of programs discussed by the Liberal caucus in opposition."

Legislation that would have provided tax credits for a portion of mortgage interest payments and property taxes died on the drawing board when the Progressive Conservative goverment was defeated last December.

EATON'S

the house

by jake banky

The Dewdney Dingbat rides again, and this time he's mounted on a new hobbyhorse.

George Mussallem, easily the most lovable redneck in the legislature, is beating the drum for economic union with the U.S.

"Central Canada has a stranglehold on the West," says this old-line Socred. "Let trade flow north-south, the way God built the continent."

It will be George's most popular crusade since he introduced legislation to protect Sasquatches.

But does he go far enough?

My father always said, if you're going to do a thing, do it well.

By that token, if you're going to be a western separatist, go whole hog.

Which brings me to the Banky Whole Hog Solution for Western Alienation and Other Curiosities of Confederation.

Before I begin let me enter a disclaimer: I actually oppose any move to break up the country.

However, with Quebecers referendering, Prairie Tories hopping into the separatist sack and B.C.'s own Gentle George panting after a California connection, it's just as well to have a contingency plan.

Hence the Whole Hog Solution, based on the universaly admired precept that a buck is a buck.

In other words, if the country is falling apart anyway, let's all make some money.

The first thing we do is sell B.C. to the U.S. The price: $1 million for every man, woman and child in the province.

For 2.5 million British Columbians it adds up to $2.5 trillion, which may sound like a heck of a lot of money but is actually a bargain.

The Americans are running short of everything B.C. has in abundance — raw materials, hydro-electric capability, fresh water, room to expand.

The military value of a land connection to Alaska is worth the purchase price itself. Not to mention oil pipeline routes.

And they would have to cough up only a fraction of the $2.5 trillion in hard cash.

All they need do is establish a special bank creditng every British Columbian with his or her million bucks and pay reasonable interest on the deposits. Most people would leave the money in the bank and live off the interest.

B.C. then would become the 51st state, biggest and wealthiest in the union. Drop the British and call it Columbia.

All the instant millionaires would be offered a choice: they could become U.S. citizens or they could take their money and live comfortably in the country of their choice.

Those who wave the Maple Leaf could shift across the Rockies to what's left of Canada, secure in their patriotism and their bank account.

Those who have been waving the Union Jack all these years could set themselves up in style back in Blighty. If they can stand it. If not, there's always a villa in the south of France or a beach house on Maui.

But there wouldn't be too many leaving the new state of Columbia. The vast majority would happily accept American citizenship and stay put, to live the good life.

Some would continue to work, of course. Some would invest their windfall in new enterprises. But there is nothing quite so relaxing to the mind as a million dollars in the bank. This would become lotus land indeed.

For Victorians there would be an added attraction: how nice to think that all those people pouring off whatever has replaced the Princess Marguerite will not be tourists. They'll be butlers looking for work.

Of couse, as with any great concept, there are a few minor details to iron out. Politics for one.

Does Premier Bennett become Governor Bennett? Do Socreds automatically become Republicans while New Democrats become, simply, Democrats? Can Dave Barrett beat Jimmy Carter in the primaries? Should we invade Alberta? Will the Yankees win the pennant?

And what am I going to do with my five BCRIC shares?

But these are mere irritations. The important thing is for B.C. to act fast, before some other province gets the same idea. We don't need the competition.

Anyhow you must admit the Banky Whole Hog Solution, patent pending, is sheer genius. And I modestly expect no particular thanks for the suggestion. If the sale goes through there need be no embarrassing banquets in my honor. I don't want the keys to the city. Keep the champagne corked.

I'll settle for the usual real estate agent's commission on the deal. Let's see now, five per cent of $2.5 trillion is . . .

But I think old George Mussallem, the man who inspired it all, should get a statue on the lawn of the legislature. Life size. And throw in a horse.

It's my treat. What the heck, I can afford it.

The Marriage Room: 583 couples last year

Taking the plunge down at 722

By BRENDA DALGLISH

More than one in four couples getting married in Victoria do so at 722 Cormorant Street.

The marriages take place in a small room that looks like a doctor's waiting room.

It's not a hideway. The room, plainly labelled Marriage Room, is in the provincial department of vital statistics.

The department handles records of three main events in our lives: births, marriages and deaths. But only those wishing to take part in a marriage ever arrive in person — otherwise all the record-keeping is on paper.

Last year 2,011 marriage licences were issued and 583 weddings were performed in the office. That may seem high but in fact it's dropping, perhaps indicating a trend back to traditional wedding ceremonies. In 1978, 1,949 marriage licences were issued and 601 marriages performed in the office.

A civil marriage is the least expensive way to get married but it does lack frills.

It is a bargain — a marriage licence costs $5 and use of the marriage room complete with the services of a marriage commissioner costs $7.50.

The civil ceremony takes about 10 minutes but the marriage commissioner will embellish it a bit if the couple asks for a poem or something special to be read.

Mrs. Debbie Scott, one of the two marriage commissioners in the office, says a variety of people, ranging from 16 to 98, choose a civil marriage. Many have been married before.

They wear just about anything from jeans to long white wedding dresses complete with veils.

Scott thinks most get married at the office because they don't believe in God and don't want the fuss of tradition.

"People aren't as religious as they used to be so they think if they don't believe in God why get married in a church."

Two witnesses are required but if a couple doesn't bring any someone can usually be quickly found nearby — even off the street, Scott said.

Marriage commissioner Debbie Scott . . . only one no-show

The office only books nine weddings a day, five days a week. Fridays and long weekends are particularly popular so they advise anyone planning a wedding to book ahead.

Couples intending to get married must apply for a marriage licence at least three days before the wedding takes place. If a couple intends to have a civil ceremony they should book the room at the same time as they apply for a licence.

About once a month a wedding party doesn't show up for the appointment, sometimes because they've decided not to get married, sometimes because they've opted for a different kind of wedding.

Has anybody ever been left at the "altar?"

Scott recalls only one several years ago.

The groom arrived and waited. And waited. And waited.

But his bride lacked either the courage or the courtesy to let him know she'd changed her mind.

They're at it again

Capistrano has its swallows, Saanich its beach partiers.

Both signal the coming of spring.

And if that is the measure, spring has arrived in Greater Victoria.

Saanich police said today officers broke up two noisy parties, the largest at Mount Douglas Park where 60 youths had collected for nocturnal rituals that are the bane of nearby residents.

The crowd dispersed without incident. No one was arrested and no liquor was seized.

Body found on sidewalk

City police are investigating the death of an unidentified man who was found on the sidewalk in the 500-block Yates street this morning.

A police spokesman said it appeared the man fell from the roof of the Yates Street carpark.

The body was discovered at 5:40 a.m.

Old survey ship heading for Ucluelet

By PAT DUFOUR

The 48-year-old survey ship William J. Stewart has a new name and will take on a new lifestyle in Ucluelet on June 1 as the floating centrepiece of a $2 million tourist resort.

Bob Wright, president of Oak Bay Marina Ltd., who bought the ship from the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation last October for "between $100,000 and $150,000," said Friday a 300-foot stretch of waterfront has been bought along Ucluelet's commercial basin. Dredging needed to dock the ship is almost complete.

The old ship, now called the Canadian Princess, will become a hotel accommodating 80 and be the base for a salmon fishing program.

A crew led by Jack Warwick, former superintendent of Vancouver Shipyards, has been preparing the former Canadian Hydrographic Service vessel for her new role since early December.

The old chart room where hydrographers worked updating charts over the decades will continue to be called the Chart Room, serving as a holding lounge for a 90-seat dining room, to be called the Stewart Room.

Shipwright Hugh Ruffell shows Wright the fine points

Being built at the Philbrook shipyard in Sidney for $600,000 are four 43-foot fibrelass boats for fishing parties.

They will cruise at 20 knots and be used for taking fishermen to the Swiftsure Bank 15 miles away and for scuba diving sorties in Barkley Sound, whale-watching off Long Beach, bird watching and observing sea lions.

Wright said news of the venture has already spread to Europe. Three German groups — 32 in each — have booked three weekends.

The resort will be run by Peter Boxford, who was a guide in the offshore fishing business at Westport, Wash., for 16 years.

Wright said 38 people will be employed initially. The first choice will go to Ucluelet residents. Victorians will make up the remainder of the work force.

Wright, who hopes to break even in three years, says the Canadian Princess will operate six months of the year and this will increase if there is a enough demand. He says 750,000 people visited Ucluelet last year and these figures will probably increase.

He emphasized the scheme is not designed for the rich, and each operation — hotel, restaurant and charter business — will work independently.

Wright said a single cabin will cost about $20, a double $25 to $29 and a four-berth cabin, $34.

The restaurant will have affordable prices.

A morning fishing charter will cost about $47 per person and an afternoon nature and scuba diving trip of five or six hours, about $30.

Many of her unique features, including her steam engines, will remain aboard the Canadian Princess.

Wright said steam engine buffs and others will be able to have free tours of the ship which became a legend in her time.

2,000 more homes make their mark

A winter works program just completed in Saanich will make things tougher for criminals.

The program, which ran from Nov. 15 to March 14, added more than 2,000 homes to the growing list of residences where property has been marked to protect against theft.

A 10-member team — six women and four men ranging in age from 18 to 24 — were involved in the project, sponsored by Saanich police and funded under the Youth Job Core Program of the federal solicitor-general's department.

Staff-Sgt. Fred Wooster, of Saanich's youth and community service division, said the group visited 2,040 homes and 114 rooms in University of Victoria student residences marking belongings with owners' social insurance numbers.

They also went to 455 businesses handing out crime prevention material and updating the police department's business reference card system.

Wooster said the team was involved in several other projects, ranging from bike registration sessions at elementary schools and UVic (1,522 bikes registered in all) to manning crime prevention and CounterAttack anti-drinking driving displays at shopping centres — Hillside Mall in November and K-Mart in December.

Three members of the group worked with school liaison police officers and helped give 35 presentations of the police department's Safety Bear program for kindergarten and primary students.

WOOSTER

. . . more to come

The trio also arranged 20 floor hockey games for school patrol kids and chaperoned them on 26 outings for free hamburgers.

Another member of the group developed a library on crime prevention material for the community service division and prepared a card index file on administrative traffic matters to improve information retrieval.

Wooster said the members of the group toured Wilkinson Road jail, sat in on courts, received a one-day course in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation from Saanich firemen, attended lectures given by the identification and personnel sections, and rode with officers on patrols.

The only cost to Saanich police was transportation, supervision and office space.

The federal government paid the wages, $120 a week for each worker; $228 a week for group leader Holly Widener and her successor Debbie Haynes.

Saanich Rotary Club chipped in $500 to buy each member of the group a jacket identifying them as police aides.

The program was the fourth run by Saanich since Youth Job Core was created four years ago, but is the first held during the winter.

The department has applied to the government for funds to hold another program starting in mid-May.

Wooster said the next project will involve a 28-foot trailer that is being fitted out with crime prevention displays.

The unit will be taken on the road over the summer.

Rites Monday for ex-deputy

Ray Rickinson, former B.C. deputy minister of human resources who served with six governments and 10 cabinet ministers, died Friday.

A funeral service will be held Monday at 1 p.m. in Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes, 1803 Quadra.

Rickinson, 67, of 1197 Esquimalt, held the deputy minister position from 1956, when the ministry was the social welfare branch of the provincial health department, until he took early retirement in October 1973.

He was born here and had worked for the government since 1929 when he began as a junior clerk. He was the longest serving deputy in Canada when he retired.

Rickinson is survived by his wife Kay; daughter Laura and son-in-law Ron Macdonald; grandsons, Brent and Darren; sisters-in-law Babe Rickinson and Mrs. Bud Longstaff; brother-in-law Frank Elston, all of Victoria.

Dear Abby:

I am the president of an organization, and we have a problem with one of our members who is very religious. She is always trying to "sell" her religion to others. Some of our members resent it; they have their own religion, and are satisfied with it.

Our biggest problem is that she thinks it's her Christian duty to visit sick people in the hospitals. She and a group of eight ladies from her church go up and down the halls, visiting patients whether they know them or not. They just walk in, "bless" the patient, stand around the bed, hold hands and pray. Then this lady reads from the scriptures and gives a sermon.

A friend of mine was recently sick in the hospital with a No Visitors sign on her door. She said that she was dozing off when in comes this self-appointed saver of souls with her missionaries. They stood around her bed, chanting and praying until a nurse came in and told them they had to leave.

We are ashamed that this woman belongs to our organization. She tells these hospital patients that they are "sinners" who must seek God's forgiveness in order to enter the kingdom of heaven, which can be very depressing for folks who hope to get well.

How can we get her to quit visiting strangers in hospitals?

Mrs. H.

Dear Mrs. H.:

First, your organization should advise her that there have been complaints about her hospital visitations and she must stop. After that, it's the responsibility of the hospital administration to protect their patients from unwelcome visitors.

Dear Abby:

My husband and I were at the home of friends recently for dinner. These friends have two dogs who are considered "members of the family."

We were served a lovely dinner on the hostess' finest china. After dinner, the dishes were removed from the table. A few minutes later our hostess returned with two of the lovely plates with some leftover food on them. She set the plates on the floor in a corner for the dogs to lick. Noticing the expression of disgust on my face, she said, "Well, it's perfectly sanitary. All the dishes go into the dishwasher to be sterilized anyway!

Any comment?

Yich

Dear Yich:

Even though the dishes are sterilized after the doglicking, the thought of eating in a home where pets and people are served off the same dishes is understandably unsettling to some. However, I'm told that there is a greater danger of dogs catching something from humans than vice versa.

Abby loves to hear from her fans. Write c/o the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4. Be sure to enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope for her personal reply.

Family pooch isn't likely to take kindly to hypnosis wonderful world of animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: After a recent TV show, my son decided he wanted to be a hypnotist. He's started his training on dogs but so far unsuccessfully. Can you give him any pointers for a more successful career? He asked me to ask you. E.W.

Dear E.W.: Few dogs will co-operate with an experienced hypnotist, let alone a beginner. Of greater concern would be the technique used to induce hypnosis — the face - to - face - staring - deep - into - the - eyes technique could be not only unrewarding but downright dangerous. Eyeball to eyeball is a direct confrontation to canines. Some might just accept such a challenge by chomping a proboscis or whatever else was handy. For safety's sake, then, your son should practice on some other species.

Dear Dr. Miller: Believe me, it was a sad day when they autopsied Pie, my goldfish. Before he died, I kept hoping he was swollen up because I'd made a mistake and he was actually a female that was pregnant. But no, he wasn't so lucky. Do you know what he had? Tuberculosis! Well, you can bet I'm worried about Sigh, now since she's been living with him for the last six months. She's just swimming around looking terribly lonesome. But so far she doesn't look sick. She's always had a roving eye and I think she could fall for any fish I'd put in there. N.Z.

Dear N.Z.: Getting Sigh socializing again shouldn't be your only concern. There's a strong chance that at this point she's carrying fish tuberculosis, too. The aquarium and/or some of its contents could also be contaminated with these TB organisms. Treating infected fish is generally unsatisfactory and inadvisable anyway because of the danger of transmission of the disease.

She shouldn't have a new partner and, in fact, her environment and equipment should be carefully isolated from other fish. As long as you keep her you'd want to take precautions for yourself, too. The various species of bacteria capable of causing fish tuberculosis may also skin infections in humans.

Dear Dr. Miller: A friend said that you said a young cat's nails shouldn't be trimmed because it will stunt its growth. You didn't really say that, did you? N.S.

Dear N.S.: No, I didn't say that. Nail trimming does nothing but remove the sharp hook fron the end of the nail, for a comparatively short time. I'm in favor of doing this and the earlier the age it's started, the easier it is to accustom the feline to the simple pedicuring procedure.

Dear Dr. Miller: I see some birds buzzing around here with nesting material in their beaks already. Does this mean, I hope, I can knock off on the free meals I've been providing them all winter? R.J.

Dear R.J.: Don't back off on the bird feeding too quickly. Some of those potential parents may be depending on it. Further, there could still be some severe storms, in which case most of your former feathered freeloaders would be on hand for some badly needed emergency rations.

Dear Dr. Miller: Which is a healthier pet, a mouse or a gerbil? E. McC.

Dear E. McC.: The gerbil is much more resistant to disease than the mouse, is generally less nervous when being handled, and is more active and therefore more interesting in the daytime.

Where it's legal to have them, then, the gerbil rates as not only a healthier but generally a better pet than the mouse might.

Anxiety often can be a greater problem than physical ailment

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

It is rare that any doctor sees a patient who, in addition to physical symptoms, does not also have some overtones of anxiety. This combination of fear and illness can be severely debilitating. Too often, the anxiety is far more destructive than the disease that brings the patient to the doctor's office.

Physicians everywhere know that the art of medicine is to recognize fears and anxiety and to stimulate their patients to reveal them. When these fears are openly expressed, and when patients can be given the added assurance they need, then it is easier to concentrate on their physical symptoms and illnesses.

Even many mature people consider it a sign of weakness if they give vent to their emotional problems. There is no shame, in this hectic world of ours, in being burdened by neurotic tendencies. In fact, it is remarkable that so many people are able to cope with their problems, produce a good day's work and carry on their family and social obligations.

Many people are unable to be serviceable to themselves and to their community because they continue to allow fear to luxuriate in darkness. A frank expression of anxiety to a doctor or a religious counselor can open new horizons for personal happiness, and for emancipation from the burdens of fear.

Fear is an illness itself. It is not transmitted by germs or by viruses. It seems to flourish in epidemic form in this harassed 20th century. Fear of cancer, fear of heart disease, fear of cataclysmic destruction by atomic bombs, fear of economic upheaval and fear of the consequences of smoking have all become a never-ending bombardment against our inner security.

Far too often fear seems to submerge hope. For many people the remarkable accomplishments in modern medicine are overshadowed by their sense of helplessness and by the fears that envelop them.

The productivity of a human being is the best yardstick of physical health and emotional well-being. It matters little if a person's productivity is destroyed by a real heart attack or by the fear of developing such a condition. Those who spend their lives dying of a cancer that doesn't exist are just as devitalized as those who truly have this dread condition.

There is a constant cry in the wilderness for emotional support and psychological guidance. There is an answer to unreasoning fear. Since fear thrives in darkness, bringing it out into the open minimizes its impact.

"Face fear frankly" is an important axiom in the control of unrealistic fears. The family doctor, the psychological counselor, the psychoanalyst and the religious advisor can offer relief from the burden of fears and anxiety.

Fear thrives on ignorance. Fear is destroyed by sensible patterns of communication with those who are trained in the understanding of human emotions.

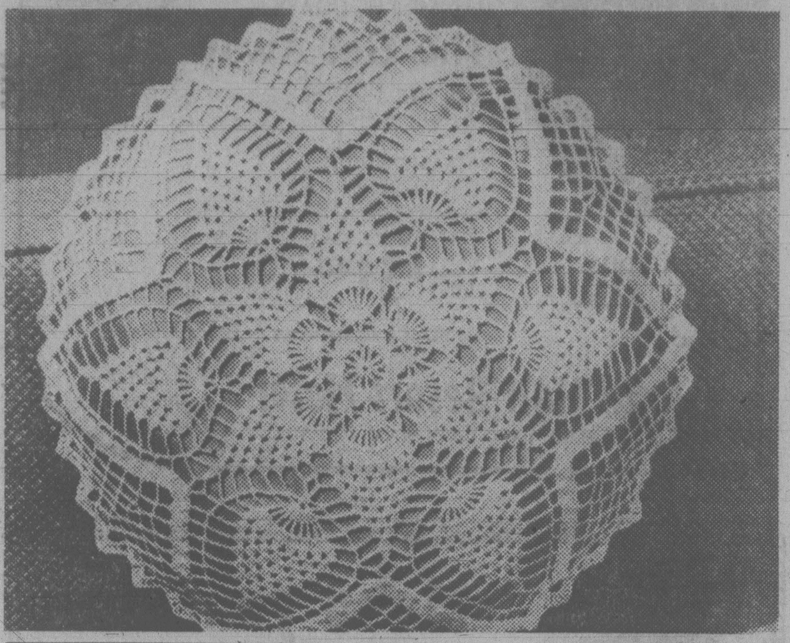
Decorative wall plaques are easy and cheap to make

Knit & Chat with May MacLean



Decorative wall plaques are becoming more and more popular and can be made quite easily for a fraction of what they cost in the store, and they make very charming gifts for all ocassions.

You can buy the wall plaques in craft stores, those that have a finished bevelled edges, or you can just use less expensive plywood or masonite — just be sure that the piece you are going to use isn't warped.

Seal the wood by painting with two coats of water soluble varnish. When dry, paint on the third coat as glue. Place your favorite print on top of the board, making sure the picture overlaps the edges. Press with your fingers in a circular motion to get out all the wrinkles and air bubles. Then let dry for ten minutes.

Any kind of picture can be used for this technique, known as decoupage, as long as there is no printing on the back to bleed through.

To make the picture appear to blend in with the wood, press it to the edges of the board with your fingers and file off excess paper along the pressed line with an emery board or sandpaper wrapped around a pencil, always using a downward motion. Also sand off any paper or glue left on the edges.

Paint one coat of clear finish used for decoupage, such as Ultra Podge, available at your local craft store, over the picture only. Finish the edges and back of the board with wood stain or paint. This is done after the print is applied to prevent uncovered spots, the clear finish seals the print so that soak won't mar the picture.

Now apply about eight more coats of the clear finish on top of the print, to give it the smooth-as-glass decoupage finish. You'll find that each coat will take about ten minutes to dry.

Finally, using a very very fine sandpaper (400-600) which has been slightly moistened, sand in a circular motion very lightly. Apply a sawtooth hanger to the back and your plaque is now ready to hang.

What to use as the picture? Well a print or picture will make a lovely plaque. Some of the scenes from calenders are extreme attractive I just hate to throw them away. Then there are special birthday and anniversary cards with certain words from children and relatives which mean so much. I have seen invitations and menus from certain important or memorial events.

This week's pattern is a charming and easily crocheted lacey doiley, and when mounted as a small pillow becomes an exquisite boudoir pillow! These little pillows look most attractive scattered on the bed especially with period furniture.

Busby boys take hat off to our bears

By SHERRI BARRON

LONDON (CP) — Few Canadian tourists who cluster outside Buckingham Palace for the daily changing of the guard are aware of it, but the guardsmen's towering headgear also originated in Canada.

As a matter of fact, those two-pound, furry black hats began life as Canadian bears.

The elite Imperial Guard of Napoleon Bonaparte wore the Canadian bearskins during the late 18th and early 19th centuries until the Grenadier Guards of Britain took them over as a trophy of war after Waterloo.

From the Grenadiers, the headwear spread to the other regiments of Household Guards, the Coldstream, Scots, Irish and Welsh regiments of foot.

Canada supplied the bearskins until the First World War. Later, supplies began to dry up and prices began to climb.

The guards tried Russian grizzly pelts, but the quality just wasn't there.

"Some guards complained the caps were too hot and they were getting tattered, so we began to seek a substitute," an army press officer said.

"We've tried everything from synthetic nylon to sheep's wool but nothing has matched the quality of Canadian skins," he said.

"We thought developing a synthetic substitute would be cheaper and might replace some of the slightly tattered caps, but the synthetic generates a lot of static electricity."

The British Army estimates it has about 8,000 of the Canadian headgear — they call them caps — in stock, but they haven't replaced any in about eight years.

Environmental concerns, the needless slaughter of Canadian black bears, and the high cost have all had a bearing on the situation.

SHAPE UP FOR SPRING WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:

Vitamin A
Thiamin
Choline
Iodine
Potassium

Vitamin E
Riboflavin
Calcium Magnesium
Manganese

Vitamin C
Niacin B6, B12
Phosphorous
Copper
Sodium

Vitamin D
Folid Acid Biotin
Iron
Zinc
d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

The no nonsense diet is available at these and other leading dealers:

Two approaches to pruning roses

jack beastall

The pruning of bush roses is done on southern Vancouver Island from mid-March to the end of March in gardens (and parks) near salt water, and from the beginning of April to mid-month in colder gardens further inland or low-lying gardens which record fairly heavy frost on clear nights.

The rose will produce some leaf growth in mild spells over winter which is usually damaged in late cold spells or severe frosts, but this growth always comes from growth buds at the top of the branches, leaving the lower buds to become activated later when temperatures have moderated.

Because of these winter mild spells, we do not prune bush roses in the fall. If we did, there would be only a few growth buds left for spring; and these could be activated in winter and killed, leaving nothing to supply new growth in spring.

The growth now on roses in warmer gardens is ignored when the bushes are pruned.

There are two ways of pruning bush roses, one to give a few, almost-perfect flowers for exhibiting in the June flower shows, the other to produce a quantity of blooms for garden display and cutting for friends and indoor arrangements. The difference is the height to which the bushes are cut back.

When two bushes of the same variety are grown, it is interesting to exhibit-prune one and garden-display-prune the other — and note the difference in the quality of the blooms.

For exhibiting not more than four buds are left, which indicates the stems will be cut back to 15 centimetres above soil level. For garden display the stems are shortened to about 30 to 40 cm above soil level.

The first step is the preparation of the pruning tools. No matter how carefully the cuts are made, blunt and dirty tools tear the fibres leaving wounds which are slow to heal and allow diseases to enter.

Wash pruners and saws in warm, soapy water to remove dried plant juices and allow to dry. Clean off all discoloration with fine sandpaper to leave shiny blades. Carefully sharpen, taking care not to change the angle of bevels. If you lack the proper tools for sharpening, have it done by a sawyer or lawnmower establishment.

Home gardeners needing a pruning saw would be well advised to invest in one of the curved Japanese saws with coated blades. These saws make a clean cut with the minimum of pressure.

Heavy gloves, not easily penetrated by thorns, will be needed and a fairly large can containing a solution of Dettol or Lysol if any diseases are present. The pruner and saw blades are dipped into the solution after each cut to prevent unnecessary spread of disease.

Some gardeners drop all pruning on the soil. This may be an idea when someone else will be responsible for cleaning up the tiny cuts, and have their fingers pierced with thorns when hand weeding around the bushes. But it saves a lot of time and pain to drop each piece into a garden cart or wheelbarrow as it is cut, then wheel it all to the burning pile.

Some approved rose fertilizer suited to local soils and conditions should be prepared in advance. The fertilizer mix will have a first and last number about equal and a higher middle number (5-10-5, for example).

The actual pruning of the bushes is easy. First remove all dead tips, dead growths and small twiggy growths that will never make stout stems.

Then stand back and study the bush from all angles and decide if some growths should be completely removed and what effect their removal will have on the shape of the plant.

All lateral growths crossing the centre of the bush are removed to allow light and air to enter and ripen the growths for flowering and to lessen the chances of mildew. When these are out of the way, the shape of the bush will have again changed and another viewing from all angles will determine if any other growths should be completely removed or an old growth cut back to a strong side growth.

The final cuts will reduce the remaining growths to the desired height of 15 or 40 cm.

Each cut is made directly above a growth bud pointing outwards, or away from the centre of the bush and on a slope. The only exception to selecting an inward-facing bud is when the bush is by a path; a bud pointing right or left is then selected.

The sloping cuts have the top point directly above a growth bud and the low point about half-way down the back of the bud on the other side of the stem. Leaving a piece of stem above a bud results in die-back and killing of the bud, as will a cut too close to the back of the bud.

Remove all prunings and fallen leaves and burn immediately to lessen the spread of disease spores.

If rose sprays are used, be sure to wear an approved mask and clothing, and cover all winter vegetables which are now being harvested. Also, notify neighbors to close windows and remove laundry — especially children's — from the clothesline, and to cover their vegetables.

Spray during a windless period, using the finest mist to settle on the bushes. Never use a jet which allows most of the spray to fall on the soil and find it's way to your and your neighbors' vegetables.

Cultivate the soil around the bushes without damaging any roots, remove annual and perennial weeds, apply the fertilizer at less than the recommended quantity on the package.

It is generally suggested that one use about one-half the fertilizer stated on the package, and give another half-quantity application in late May when the flower buds are developing. Too much fertilizer now will cause excessive growth and few flowers.

After applying the fertilizer, give a light spray of water from the hose to dissolve the crystals, and a thorough watering the next day to carry the food down to the root area for use as the spring growth starts on the pruned plants.

Growth is rapid on bush roses in spring and water at ther roots is necessary for sufficient food to be picked up. Watering should be started in mid-April, giving a good soaking once every 10 to 15 days according to type of soil.

Insufficient water at the roots early in the season is a proven cause of mildew later in the season on susceptible varieties.

Work for the week

Rambler roses having small flowers, prune out unwanted and dead growth and that which bloomed last year; tie in and train the long, new canes.

If weather and condition of grass suitable, sweep with stiff broom to remove debris and aerate a little. Walk on it as little as possible.

Complete pruning of late-flowering shrubs as described during the past week.

End of month, sow indoors sweet basil, marjoram, summer savory, parsley in separate small containers so plants can go outdoors later. Exception is basil, which needs indoor warmth with good daylight until about late May.

Trim sage, thyme and winter savory which are outdoors. Cut down old stems of lemon balm, as new growth is seen coming through soil.

Lettuce and other saladings in coldframe; space out seedlings to get as many usable little plants as possible.

Lift chive clumps to divide and replant bulbs in groups of three to five.

Daily care for all indoor or greenhouse seedlings is needed.

Hot-footing it

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "I guess you can stomp pretty hard when there's a bomb about to go off under your feet," said a police spokesman after an officer trampled out a burning fuse connected to two sticks of dynamite.

Officials said the bomb, left Sunday at the studios of television station KPTV, was defused by Patrolman Lloyd Higgens when an anonymous caller tipped authorities.

Indians bracing for new cash gush

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Oh, to be a member of southern Alberta's Blood Indian reserve where oil exploration money flows thicker than water.

Last week each band member received a $2,000 share of $11 million, representing half of $22 million in bonus money the band received last August from oil companies for exploration rights.

After May 1, the band may have to cope with more cash. On that date lease and permit exploration rights on a total of 72,000 acres on the reserve will be up for bids by oil companies. That's more land than produced the $22 million.

Wally Domerosky of the Indian and northern affairs department, said Wednesday in a interview from Calgary:

"The acreage is more this time but I'm skeptical. I don't think it will produce as much. On the other hand, it could produce more."

Domerosky said oil companies have drilled in six areas between the Blood and Peigan reserves in the last two months. He said the drilling indicates oil companies are interested in the area, "but the industry is unpredictable."

"If oil is found on the reserve, royalties will far exceed what they get in bonus money."

CP hotel sold

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Pacific Hotels Ltd. of Toronto has announced it has sold the Hotel Saskatchewan in Regina to businessmen Peter Gundy of Regina and Patrick Waters of Saskatoon.

Sale of the 10-storey hotel, which will be operated by the new owners, is effective April 1 subject to statutory approvals. Price was not disclosed.

Owner blows up house

RAMA, Sask. (CP) — A man who blew his new home up when he tried to reset the pilot light on his furnace says he remembers little of the experience.

Ed Yaworski, 66, spent four days in hospital with burns to his hands and face and still suffers headaches from the blast in early March.

"There wasn't much noise down in the basement," he said.

"When I opened my eyes and saw the sky and heard my wife crying, I knew something big had happened.

"I'm lucky I put on my long underwear on that morning because that saved my legs."

The man who rescued Yaworski said he found him standing beside the furnace, looking like a youngster caught doing something wrong. Windows were shattered throughout the tiny village.

Yaworski was building the home behind the family's business, a hotel. He said he still plans to sell the hotel and move into a house in Rama, his home for 41 years.

P. J. Sheasby of the department of labor's safety service said the explosion was caused by gas escaping from an open-ended supply pipe. When Yaworski tried to reset the pilot light, it ignited.

Two in a row for Melfort

MELFORT, Sask. (CP) — It's two in a row for Melfort, Sask., in the annual energy-conservation challenge with Kentville, N.S.

The central Saskatchewan town defended its title at the second-annual three-day event, reducing electrical consumption 16.1 per cent, compared to a marginal reduction of 0.4 per cent in the Maritime community, according to meter readings.

Melfort won the first contest last year with a cut of 17.5 per cent, while Kentville showed no decline.

The challenge was organized by Kentville, a town of about 5,000, last year to underscore the need to conserve energy. Melfort, with a population of about 5,100, came up as the challenger after Statistics Canada was asked to identify another Canadian community of comparable size.

"We got wonderful co-operation from the schools here" in promoting the contest, said Melfort contest chairman Thurston Talbot.

"Students were going home and unplugging their TVs, letting their parents see only so much TV a night, and turning out lights behind them."

"Some of the banks and stores didn't have an electric light on during the campaign at all," despite being open as usual for Thursday-night shopping, said Talbot.

"They were using coal-oil lanterns and anything else they could find. It was really quite a thing to see. You'd go walking down the streets and wonder whether the stores were really open."

Residents also heeded pleas to cut back drastically on the use of automobile block heaters, which find less use in Nova Scotia. Talbot said temperate weather over the the three-day span helped.

Power consumption dropped 18 per cent on the first day, 19.3 on the second and only 10.3 per cent on the third day, for a 16.1-per-cent average. Talbot said consumption in Kentville actually rose six per cent on the first day.

Crafts society fine upheld

CALGARY (CP) — A Court of Queen's Bench judge has upheld the conviction of a Calgary crafts society for selling souvenirs made with the feathers of birds of prey.

In a judgment just released, Mr. Justice John Waite refused to overturn last June's ruling of a provincial court judge who fined the Old Cabin Crafts Society $100 for trafficking in the feathers of eagles, hawks and owls.

The feathers were on 63 sourvenirs seized by provincial officials. The sourvenirs included a headdress, war clubs, tomahawks and pipes.

Mr. Justice Waite noted that the souvenirs were newly made for the tourist trade.

Under The Wildlife Act, it is an offence to sell parts of wildlife, including birds of prey.

The non-profit society, which operates a retail store, was one of three charged in 1978. Charges against the other two were dismissed when the court ruled that their items were authentic Indian relics, not newly-made souvenirs.

Indian principals pushed

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — A three-year program to train Manitoba Indian teachers as school principals will begin at Brandon University next fall, a university official said Wednesday.

University President Harold Perkins said the program is the first of its kind in Canada.

He told the university's board of governors that more than $500,000 is being provided by the Donner Canadian Foundation and the federal government for the project.

The private group has approved a $285,000 grant for the program, he said, while the federal department of Indian and northern affairs is committed to $100,000 a year for three years.

Dale Hayes, dean of the university's education faculty, said the program is "a milestone for native education in Canada."

Between 300 and 400 native teachers, he said, have graduated from the university in the last decade.

Insurance faces in the red

REGINA (CP) — The provincial government suffered a trace of embarrassment Friday when the opposition established that Saskatchewan Government Insurance was outbid on a department of highways contract.

Paul Rousseau (PC — Regina South) reminded the house that Highways Minister Eiling Kramer said last week anyone would be foolish to buy insurance from a company other than SGI since the rates would be higher.

Wes Robbins, minister responsible for SGI, told the house that in 1979 a private firm underbid SGI by 35 per cent to get the contract for liability insurance for department of highways vehicles.

Robbins said SGI won the contract back for 1980.

Outside the house, he explained that it is common practice in commercial insurance to bid contracts low, lose money on them and use that to write off income taxes. He said he had no details when asked if SGI would lose money on the department of highways contract for 1980.

Sandholm is one of 31 persons charged in connection with a six-month investigation into Greater Victoria drug dealings by an RCMP undercover officer.

A 19-year-old was fined a total of $100 after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance by using obscene language and resisting a peace officer.

Robert Louis Ross was fined $25 on the first charge and $75 on the second.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Saanich police were called shortly after 11:30 p.m. March 6 to McDonald's Restaurant, 3465 Saanich.

Ross, who was complaining he was being rushed, and his companion had been asked to leave because of abusive language. While being removed, Ross kicked one of the officers, resulting in the second charge.

Trident trespass gets probation

SEATTLE (AP) — Thirty-nine persons, including a number of Canadians, were put on probation Friday after being convicted of illegally entering the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor, Wash., spokesmen for the protesters said.

Most of those convicted were sentenced to three years probation with the restriction that they obey all laws and not go within about 75 metres of the Trident base, said spokesmen for Live Without Trident, the Seattle anti-nuclear group that led the protest last October. Violating probation could mean up to six years in prison.

Several Canadians had previously been charged with illegal entry, but the number sentenced and their identities were not known.

Assault probation

A conditional discharge and 18 months probation was given in county court Friday to Lauren Robinson, 22, who pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm Oct. 4 in a Saanich domestic dispute.

Judge Leslie Cashman, in granting the request of defence counsel John Hills, said the circumstances showed it was in the best interest of Robinson and not contrary to the public interest to grant the conditional discharge, which means if she successfully completes her probation she will not have a criminal record.

Alcoholism theme of talk

Jack Saywell will speak on Healing Relationships with the Alcoholic at the meeting of the Canadian Guild of Health, March 27 at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra.

A prayer service in the chapel at 1:30 p.m. will be followed by a general meeting at 2 p.m. in the lower church hall.

Many people have a misconception of the group's aims, thinking it to be a diet or exercise group.

In the words of Canon Hilary Butler, the guild aims are to follow the example of Jesus Christ in "curing whatever illness or infirmity there was among the people."

The guild is an inter-church association of Christians, which strives through prayer and quiet consulation to keep alive in the hearts of church people the Gospel aim of healing.

While fully accepting the work of the medical profession, members of the guild who have what St. Paul called "the gift of healing" use their gifts within the life of the Church to augment the work of doctors in helping others towards the health of the total person.

Those not so gifted offer the ministry their prayers for the sick, and so the ministry of Christ is perpetuated in our day.

Butler said the healing of human lives also involves the reconciling of divisions and hostilities between people.

The Victoria branch of the guild is particularly interested in the church's role as a reconciler.

At its monthly meetings at St. John's, programs often concern problems of interpersonal relationships along with prayer for individual sick or suffering people.

Meetings are at 2 p.m. on the last Thursday of each month except December, July and August.

All are welcome, and there is no charge.

Rubbing shoulders with greats of theatre world

By ANTHONY JENKINS

SHOW PEOPLE*, by Kenneth Tynan. Musson $15.95.

NOEL COWARD AND HIS FRIENDS*, by Cole Lesley, Graham Payn and Sheridan Morley. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $23.50.

Kenneth Tynan has been Britain's most influential theatre critic since the fifties: champion of the New Drama, instigator of the four-letter word on the BBC, dramaturge for London's National Theatre, producer of Oh! Calcutta! By now, Kenny knows anyone who is anyone in show biz on both sides of the Atlantic.

Tynan is also a journalist with an eye to the marketplace. The five "profiles in entertainment" gathered together in this book originally appeared in The New Yorker and are expertly tailored to that audience. But in hardback they seem jejeune. They were, after all, designed as a quick read, a personal and impressionistic account of five newsworthy personalities.

Yet Tynan's special and enduring gift has always been the precise way he knives into the centre of a play or an actor's performance. Each of these essays has its paragraph or two of original, incisive summary, but to get that nub one floats through pages of brightly written magazine-style chat.

The essay on Mel Brooks is effective for just that reason. Since the essence of Brooks is so mercurial, Tynan puts himself through a lively chase along this or that angle of his subject's personality before he finally nails him down. Ultimately Brooks, whose films burlesque other films, comes to typify the cinema's obsession with itself: "What is new about film is that it is the first narrative art to be instantly accessible . . . This explains why so many contemporary novels and plays, as well as films, are swollen with reference to, quotations from, and parodies of old movies."

In the other pieces, Tynan's own personality becomes a major filter. Because of that, an essay on Johnny Carson reads more interestingly between the lines than through them. Carson's image as a cult figure for Middle America is obviously something Tynan has to be impressed by, yet his own political commitment rankles against Carson's bland, almost icy professionalism. Trying to be fair, Tynan seems continually to back-pedal: on the one hand, Carson is "the very best we shall get" within the limits of commercial TV, but should he not also "challenge, disturb, provoke"? Yet, then again, "to blame him for that would be to accuse him of breaking a promise he never made."

What surprised me most about this book is that Tynan emerges as the essential and ultimate "fan". Like all enthusiasms, this has its irritating side, an urge to be in on things. If the University at Santa Barbara throws a Tom Stoppard Festival, "I hasten to southern California. Stoppard whisked from the airport to a press conference . . . where I join him."

Off he goes, too, to watch Stoppard play cricket for Harold Pinter's eleven. All part of the assignment perhaps, but we are then assured that Tynan is just as keen on the game as anyone else there, and how he rubbed shoulders with Harold and Lady Antonia in the pub bar after the match.

On the other hand, when Tynan is writing about someone with whom he cannot be on matey terms (or at least nearby, in the jump seat), his stance has just the right mixture of sophisticated adulation to convince us of his subject's legendary stature.

For that reason, the essays on Ralph Richardson and on Louise Brooks, the silent-movie star, are for me the two that work best. Tynan's love for them leads to a fund of anecdote and, in the case of the reclusive and invalid Miss Brooks, to the sort of honest self-appraisal which could only have been given to a sympathetic admirer.

Tynan's adoring essay can only add to her legend: "She has flown solo. The price to be paid for such individual autonomy is, inevitably, loneliness," a vulnerability he finds reflected in her films, where her face transmits "the movements of thought and soul."

These five pieces are gems of their kind: subjective, probing, sympathetic, even a trifle abrasive. Yet for all their panache, or probably because of it, they do not make a lasting book.

Noel Coward and his Friends may look like that other kind of dressed-up impermanence, the coffee-table book: yet it is not. The authors are the Master's executors; the first two belonging to his "family", while Morley is a lifelong acquaintance and biographer. Having known Coward so well, the three have put together a store of photographs, memorabilia, press-cuttings, cartoons, and lyrics to convey more personally the man and the mask.

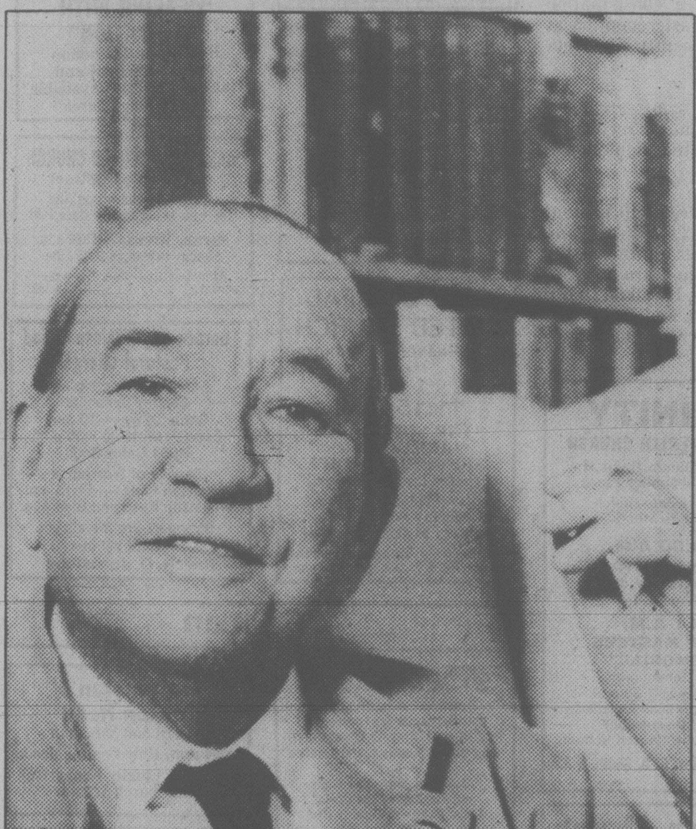
Their text is adequate, in that it reflects or emphasizes the pictures, and is far more than adequate in its breezy, sympathetic tone. The slightly mocking wonder behind the way they tell of Noel's enormous talent and energy exactly captures that "friend's" perspective and gives their book a tougher edge than might have been expected.

Coward's long career is documented through each separate decade. Accordingly, the book works more as an efficient view-finder on modern theatre history than as a lavishly illustrated synopsis of Coward's story. The chapters on the '20s and '30 are particularly interesting from this angle.

Nevertheless, the book does have its fine points to add to the Coward biography. A sequence from his mother's memoirs shows Noel, as infant prodigy, flying to his first audition as the result of a newspaper article on the formation of a new children's theatre. We learn, too, how his mother overcame her worries about the boy's lack of formal education because of a message from a music-hall medium.

The authors also underline the fact that Coward's later plays continued to hold their audiences in the fifties despite the disparagement of the critics.

Admirers of Coward will adore this book. Those who love the theatre will find it fascinating and useful.



Coward . . . mum listened to the medium

Masters of poison pen

By WALTER YOUNG

THE HECKLERS*, by Peter Desbarats and Terry Mosher. McClelland and Stewart. $19.95.

Canadians have never taken their politicians very seriously. Generally speaking we have treated them with much less reverence than our British or American cousins treat theirs. It may be that we have been blessed with the sort of politician that it is difficult to venerate. Who, after all, can wax eloquent about Mackenzie King or R. B. Bennett? The closest we have come has been with John Diefenbaker, and then it was engineered by the man himself. But despite his best efforts, even he was satirized unmercifully throughout his political career.

As a consequence of this national disdain for the would-be great, poking fun at national leaders has been a stock in trade of many of our comedians. The early versions of Spring Thaw, Dr. Bundolo and the Royal Canadian Air Farce would be lost without our political leaders to mock. Rich Little started his career in Ottawa doing imitations of Lester Pearson, John Diefenbaker and Charlotte Whitton. The master in this field was, of course, Max Ferguson. Rawhide made fun of our national foibles, but most of all of our national leaders.

It is not surprising then that Canadian cartoonists are almost unique in their development of the caricature, which is the art of revealing some essential truth about an individual by the skilful overemphasis of some principal trait. The leading editorial cartoonists in the United States, Wright, Oliphant, Fischetti and the great Herblock, are not caricaturists, however devastating their pictorial commentary may be. Equally, the notable British cartoonists have not been caricaturists.

The difference is straightforward. For a cartoonist like Norris or the American Oliphant, or the British Trog, the message is in the total drawing, caption included. The drawing may include a representation of a leading politician but it is the setting more than the figure of the politician itself that carries the message. Duncan Macpherson or Aislin use the total setting but as often as not it is the drawing of the politician himself that conveys the central message — or, indeed, what may be the whole message of the cartoon. In the same way that David Levine's great drawings of Richard Nixon with the menacing proboscis, narrow eyes and bared fangs carried the message more clearly than any prose, so too Macpherson's drawings of Diefenbaker or Bierman's of Bill Bennett seldom require a caption.

Desbarats and Mosher — who, as Aislin, is the most acerbic of our contemporary cartoonists and the most gifted caricaturist — have brought together a collection of some of the best Canadian political cartoons. Their selection is most agreeable. It covers not merely the history of political cartooning in Canada, but includes as well a brief section on the very early history of the art reaching back to Daumier, Gillray and Tenniel. They conclude the book with a biographical dictionary of virtually all of our editorial cartoonists, from Bengough to Waghorn.

The organization of the book is a bit idiosyncratic. The framework is only loosely chronological and is framed by biographical studies of some of the great cartoonists both living and dead. In these the authors are universally positive about their subjects. That is understandable, since they are writing about their present and past colleagues. To the student of Canadian history — and cartoons are an important historical artifact — uniformly glowing commentary is less than helpful. It is not that editorial cartoonists have been universally on the side of right. It is more likely that the authors reflect the fact that the significance of editorial drawings has only been recently acknowledged in Canada.

Nevertheless, it would be useful to know how much of the editorial content in cartoons is dictated by editors and how much reflects the views of the cartoonist. How many were merely gifted draftsmen, delineating the ideas and philosophy of their employers? That is not a particularly ignoble occupation; most people earn their living doing what other people pay them to do. Desbarats and Mosher, however, do give the impression that editorial cartoonists are a free and independent lot, like a few columnists. Many undoubtedly are, but some are not. Several, like Jack Boothe and John Collins, for instance, took such a consistently one-sided view of politics that it is difficult to think they were not drawing someone else's ideas. Boothe was the cartoonist for a scurrilous anti-semitic propaganda sheet that was part of a campaign to discredit the CCF in the forties.

But that sort of criticism aside, this is a splendid introduction to a form of political commentary that flourishes in Canada in a style seldom seen elsewhere and displays a skill and often devastating insight that contributes to a healthy cynicism about politics and politicians.

The legal travails of Bob Bierman demonstrate the effectiveness of one cartoon in revealing an aspect of political behavior that few editorials could do as deftly or as well. It is in cartoons like that or in Aislin's caricatures of Claude Ryan and Rene Levesque that their audience can sense the edge beneath the smile and grasp some essential truth more clearly than if it were written. It is not that we want to hold our politicians in contempt, but rather that we want to avoid seeing them as more than they really are.

Power, mystery in epic Arctic tale

By WALTER KELLYTHORNE

SPIRIT WRESTLER*, by James Houston. McClelland and Steward. $14.95.

Although the image of Canada as an ice-bound land inhabited by exotic creatures both human and animal is one that modernists abhor, the image persists — not least because it is partly true, and because some of our writers are so persistent in their vision.

The last year, for example, has seen the publication (all by McClelland and Stewart, a company which, despite its embarrassing enthusiasms for the Shah of Iran, seems determined to maintain the availability of what might be called "the outdoor novel") of at least three novels set in the Arctic. Apart from their virtues as fiction, these books also share another facet: their authors have all lived and worked in the north, and bring to their fictions a versimilitude that can't be manufactured.

James Houston in particular has a wide and varied experience in the Arctic that dates to 1948. As a Northern Service Officer and, later, as Civil Administrator of West Baffin Island, Houston made the contacts and lived the life that later emerged in his efforts to bring Inuit art to the world and the writing of his own dozen books.

Spirit Wrestler is the latest offering from his experience in the north.

Abandoned by his mother, raised in the brutal Raven's family, Shoona ("What-is-it?") seems destined for a life of endless drudgery — until, that is, he meets Kowlee.

Here is Kowlee:

". . . her hair was twisted in the old style . . . She had tattoo markings of long blue lines on her cheeks and chin, and on her hands, and on all her fingers. Her dark-brown face was dominated by her mighty cheekbones. They were wide, thrust forward, drawing the skin tight across her small nose, narrowing her bright-black eyes . . .

"Suddenly she laughed . . . and I saw her squared white teeth. Most women's teeth are flat from chewing sealskin soft. Not hers, for she had never done such things. I must tell you now that she was not at all like other women."

Kowlee builds a small igloo for Shoona and incarcerates him there. Without food, water or light for a month, he emerges from the igloo a spirit wrestler. His wandering life with Kowlee, Wolf Jaw and Avo Divio begins.

There's only one thing wrong: Shoona, like the others, is a fraud.

Shoona, at least, is under no illusions about his fraud: though possessed of what after his month in the igloo he believes is a magic word, his actual shamanistic practices among the people of Baffin Island consist of little more than conjurer's tricks and an ability to frighten those who seek his services. And because he is dying — his entire story is told to a northern services officer who takes him in when he is again rejected by his people — we are privy to a story told by a man who has absolutely nothing left to hide.

Interest in shamans and magic has been widespread over the last 10 years, and it's usually been impossible to separate fact from fantasy — if it's possible, at all, to establish any kind of truth in the matter.

But Shoona has established his own truth.

Oddly enough, the people with whom he lives and who support him — for Shoona neither hunts nor fishes — believe in him. Too well: several deaths occur, accidents happen, and the people begin to fear him.

Alone, he ends his days as he began.

Although Spirit Wrestler is a novel, James Houston makes clear that it is based very much on real events. As he writes in his postscript, "The true meaning of this story I leave to my readers, and wish them God's good help in their solution."

We'll need it: the power and mystery of this tale is like life itself, and as insoluble.

Houston . . . he knows the territory

READING THIS PAGE COULD SAVE YOU THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN FUEL OVER THE NEXT FIVE YEARS.

Gasoline is too expensive to waste and it's not going to get any cheaper. By comparing these 1980 models before you buy, you can make enormous savings. For example: 81 models have a 5 year fuel cost of $2,827 or less, and use between 5.0 and 8.3 litres of fuel per 100 kilometers; they are part of the energy solution. An additional 249 models have a 5 year fuel cost of under $3,609 and use between 8.4 and 11.5 litres per 100 kilometers; they're reasonable. But beware, the rest of the 1980 models use up to 20.4 litres per 100 kilometers and have a 5 year fuel cost of up to $6,401; and that's a lot of money. So before you make any decision about a new car, look at some startling comparisons below.

81 models in 1980 have a 5 year fuel cost of $2,827 or less and use 8.3 litres of fuel or less to go 100 kilometers. They're part of the solution.

249 models in 1980 have a 5 year fuel cost of under $3,609 and use between 8.4 and 11.5 litres to go 100 kilometers. They're reasonable.

RATING SYSTEM

FIVE YEAR FUEL COST

These figures are based on Transport Canada's fuel consumption ratings for 1980 model cars, assuming average driving of 20,000 kilometers per year, a fuel cost of 24¢ per litre of regular gasoline ($1.09 per gallon) and a 10% annual increase to allow for price increases. These tests were conducted on a chassis dynamometer, with a combination of 55% city driving and 45% highway. Actual figures will vary depending on such factors as weather, road conditions, driving habits and condition of the car.

COMBINED RATING

This specifies the number of litres of fuel required to travel 100 kilometers. ENGINE SIZE or displacement, is given in litres. CYLINDERS specifies how many. TRANSMISSION: M = Manual, A = Automatic, O/D = Overdrive, Numeral = Number of forward gears.

FUEL TYPES:

R – regular; H – premium; X – unleaded; D – diesel.

(Note: Identical rating codes may show different 5 year fuel costs because vehicles involved use different types of fuel at varying costs.)

The system of rating fuel consumption is now expressed in litres per hundred kilometers... L/(100km), replacing miles per Imperial gallon.

Under the old system, the higher the miles per gallon, the more economical the vehicle. Now the reverse is true. The lower the fuel consumption figure, the better.

As a point of reference, try calculating your fuel consumption with your existing car: If your car's odometer is in kilometers, divide litres of fuel by kilometers and multiply by 100 = litres/100 km.

If your odometer is in miles, multiply miles by 1.6 = kilometers then insert kilometers in above equation.

U.S. hostages end 20th week with no release date in sight

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The 53 U.S. hostages were ending their 20th week in captivity today with prospects for their release as elusive as ever.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, in an address Friday marking the start of the Moslem New Year, revealed he had proposed to Moscow last month that a five-nation commission be set up to investigate the Afghan situation, but that the Kremlin rejected the idea.

Meanwhile, officials of several Western European governments confirmed that the ambassadors of the nine Common Market members in Tehran have stepped up secret consultations on ways to press Iran into freeing the 50 Americans held at the occupied U.S. embassy.

The officials would give no details on what was being considered. But the French said a possible break in diplomatic relations with Iran was being contemplated.

The U.S. says it has no intention of severing diplomatic relations with Iran, despite the hostage crisis.

In Washington, State Department spokesman David Passages said such a move had been discussed but had been rejected "because we continue to see some purpose in the status quo."

Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini has said the hostages' fate will be decided by the new Iranian parliament. But the two-stage balloting to elect its 270 members is not expected to be completed until mid-April, and the parliament is not expected to take up the hostage question until mid-May or later.

A spokesman for the embassy militants, reached by telephone by The Associated Press from Nicosia, Cyprus, said Friday they will not free the hostages "until the criminal shah is returned to Iran" for trial. The young Moslems have made this same demand ever since storming the embassy Nov. 4.

Meanwhile, Canada's ambassador to Iran, Ken Taylor, received the key to the city of New York Friday from Mayor Edward Koch, who called him a "bona-fide hero" for smuggling six Americans out of Tehran earlier this year.

Koch described the escape of the Americans as "more electrifying than any cloak-and-dagger fiction ever written."

Gas-use restraint urged despite high inventories

Times News Services

The U.S. petroleum industry this week reported record inventories of gasoline but at the same time the energy department asked motorists to use even less fuel during the next three months than they did during the gas crisis of 1979.

Federal energy officials in Washington called for more restraint in the voluntary conservation program aimed at cutting national usage by 3.3 per cent, compared with consumption during the spring driving season a year ago.

The goal for California is a much more modest reduction, one-half of one per cent. California benefits from a complex target-setting system that includes historical usage, patterns of weather and tourism, as well as previous conservation efforts.

Department officials hope high prices and less driving will combine to restrict the use of gasoline without bringing on the panic that started last May

The American Petroleum Institute reported in New York that consumption has continued to decline in the wake of soaring prices. As a result gasoline stocks rose to 277.9 million barrels in the week ended March 14. That was up from 273.2 million a week earlier and well ahead of the old record for the period of 275.7 million set in the week of March 3, 1978.

To Allah praise . . .

DAR ES SALAAM (UPI) — Moslems rejoiced at prayers Friday convinced that their appeals to Allah produced long overdue rains that reduced the threat of famine in Tanzania.

The Tanzania Moslem Council made an appeal over Radio Tanzania Wednesday, asking all Moslems to pray for rain.

On Thursday there was some rain, and Friday the major Moslem holy day of Navirose, the skies poured for two hours as the faithful again gathered at Dar Es Salaam mosques for noon prayers.

. . . As pests graze

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — Hundreds of thousands of mice have descended on the south Australian coastal town of Ceduna — devouring haystacks, household food and even bed-sheets.

Sections of the main highway outside town are slippery from mouse corpses, and the rodents chew through cupboards, rubber doorstops and steel-wool used to block their holes, residents said.

Poison has been used to some effect, but agriculture department officials are reluctant to use it widely because of the danger to wildlife.

Cancer x-rays debated

WASHINGTON (WP) — Johns Hopkins doctors said Friday cigarette smokers over 40 should still get an annual chest x-ray "as their only chance" of survival if they have developed lung cancer.

The American Cancer Society said this week that Americans in general need not have annual physicals to detect cancer until after age 40, and no symptom-free persons will benefit from yearly chest x-rays.

The dissenting Johns Hopkins doctors began screening 10,000 male smokers over 45 in 1974 to find the best way to detect early lung cancer.

Some of the smokers get a sputum test, then a chest x-ray. Others get just a chest x-ray. Some early cancers have been found by the sputum test, said Dr. R. Robinson Baker.

Human torch lit for Poland

KRAKOW (AP) — An elderly man burned himself to death in the city's market square Friday, protesting political conditions in Poland.

Word of his death spread quickly and people flocked to the square throughout the day to place flowers on the site.

Police said 76-year-old Valenty Badylak of Krakow was senile. A communique distributed by the official news agency PAP hours after the incident described Badylak as a mental patient, and said he died of burns on the way to hospital.

"Never mind if he was crazy," said one woman placing a bouquet in the square. "What he did was heroic."

Badylak tied himself to an old fountain in the huge square, poured a can of gasoline over his head and lighted it, witnesses said. There was no time for police or anyone else to intervene.

Before igniting the fuel, Badylak made a short speech saying he was "fed up" with the political situation in Poland and wanted to make a public protest against the upcoming national parliamentary election, witnesses said. The Sunday balloting for a government-approved slate of candidates is used by the government to affirm the political system.

Witnesses said Badylak carried three banners, two of which were obviously political.

One said "For Katyn," another "Down with totalitarianism," and the third, apparently a personal message, said 'For my grandson, whom they force to drink."

Katyn is the name of a village and forest in the U.S.S.R, where more than 4,000 Polish military officers were massacred during the Second World War.

Krakow is the former home town of Pope John Paul. The Vatican said it has no comment on the immolation.

$7M for tonsillectomy 'vegetable'

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A 10-year-old Long Island girl was awarded $7.1 million in damages Friday by a jury which found that a tonsillectomy seven years ago left her a human vegetable.

Following a six week trial, a state Supreme Court jury awarded Anita Street $6 million for pain and suffering plus $750,000 for future care.

The girl's parents, Helen and Leonard Street of West Babylon were awarded an additional $375,000 as the value of their nursing services on the child's behalf.

The suit said Anita was afflicted with Down's syndrome, also known as mongolism, before the operation. She was described as mildly retarded but able to be educated, to walk and talk, play with toys, color books, dress and care for herself.

The jury was told that Anita now has no control over body movements and does not respond to intellectual stimuli. She needs to wear diapers and be hand fed, and cannot walk or talk.

HOLLYWOOD — He is not often in town for, despite his many years on the screen, he is not a Hollywood man. No, William Holden prefers the quiet of his home in Palm Springs — a place stocked with the treasures and mementoes of his world travels where Bertie, his pet boa-constrictor, keeps him company.

An interesting man, Holden.

If you want to see his eyes glaze over, ask him to talk about his movies. He will tell you he has just finished The Earthling in Australia and that he is soon to start S.O.B. for Blake Edwards, and he will do so politely.

William Holden

But if you want to see him really come to life, ask him about his next animal safari in Kenya, or the trip he is planning to take into Outer Mongolia with his companion of recent years, actress Stefanie Powers.

Years ago, bored witless by life in the Hollywood goldfish bowl, he set out on his nomadic wanderings. These took him to Kenya, where he founded the Safari Club, and to Hong Kong and Japan, where he developed commercial interests. They also took him to the Pacific, where he explored New Guinea and began encouraging and collecting primitive art.

Now, at 61, a true citizen of the world, he spends almost as much time travelling as he does hanging about sound stages waiting to speak his lines.

In the process he has developed some interesting, if expensive, travelling habits. If he has to fly to London from Los Angeles, for instance, he sets out in the opposite direction.

"I discovered years ago that flying west to east was murder," he says. "I'd be knocked out for days. So now if I have to go to London I try to find some excuse to go via Hong Kong or Singapore and fly east to west. That way I don't get tired at all."

An expensive way to travel, undoubtedly. Happily, Holden can afford it. He works a lot and, thanks to a cleverly arranged percentage deal on The Bridge on the River Kwai, which made a fortune, he was able to negotiate what became an annuity for life.

He came into town a while ago to do some post-production work on The Earthling and at the end of the day, sitting over coffee in his hotel he talked about his life today.

"A lot of people think it's insane for me to go running all over the world when I could stay put in Palm Springs," he said. "But I happen to feel that rounding up six Somali wild ass that are threatened with extinction is just as important as wondering what the next movie will be.

"I love traveling. Stef and I are planning a trip to Tashkent and then on to Outer Mongolia. And this summer I'm going on my last game-capturing expedition in Kenya (most of the animals go to zoos). My part of Kenya is changing, becoming agricultural, so it probably will be the last one."

Despite all his years in movies — going back to Golden Boy in 1939 — Holden has always been an intensely private man. Indeed, one of the reasons he left Hollywood was to protect his privacy.

"Years ago I used to go to La Floridita in Havana where Hemingway used to hang out. Often I'd see him sitting there, but I could never bring myself to go up and say hello. Sometimes I wish I had. His wife Mary told me afterwards that he wouldn't have minded at all; he liked my work.

Some of the things he is called upon to do in his movies are fairly strenuous. But he thinks nothing of it for he is in fine trim for a man of 61.

"We pay far too much attention to chronological age. When I got to be 60 I was working on a movie and they had a cake for me with one candle on it. Some guy said: 'The cake isn't big enough to hold 60.' I got depressed for a week. Yet until that moment I hadn't given it a thought. Why the hell do we have to be reminded all the time? I feel as young as I ever did.

The genius of Dr. Willan

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Not everyone realizes that this year of 1980 is an important Canadian centennial. The people who should know, and probably do to greater or lesser degree, are those seriously involved with music.

For on Oct.12 of this year, it will be 100 years since the birth of the man often referred to as the "dean of Canadian composers".

Healey Willan died at his Toronto home in 1968, still musically active, having had enormous influence on a number of major contemporary Canadian musicians, leaving to the posterity of his adopted country, almost 800 compositions.

Included are two symphonies, a piano concerto, two violin concertos, and numerous compositions for organ and choir, as well as anthems, masses and other liturgical music, hymns, two operas and chamber works.

Willan, during his lifetime was honored over and over again and not only in Canada.

In 1953 he was invited to compose one of the Homage Anthems for the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth, a first such honor for a Commonwealth composer. The anthem, O Lord, Our Governour, was the only one by a living composer performed in the Westminster Abbey ceremony.

He was also commissioned at the time by the CBC to write a Coronation Suite for chorus and orchestra and this was broadcast across Canada and by shortwave to the United Kingdom as Canada's tribute to the Queen.

Among the rarest of musical honors, in 1956 Willan was awarded the Lambeth Doctorate of Music. This can only be conferred by the Archbishop of Canterbury with the sanction of the Queen. At the time there were only four other musicians who bore the accompanying title, Doctor of Music (Cantaur). All four lived in England.

Now, in this year of his centenary, fresh honor is being accorded his memory from coast to coast.

Performances of Willan works scheduled across Canada are listed in a 23-page summary.

The Post Office is issuing a Healey Willan commemorative stamp in July.

Not included in the summary issued at the beginning of January, are Victoria contributions, including the performance of his Symphony No.1 in D minor, which Paul Freeman plans to give with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra in October.

Other proposed performances of Willan music include that of University of Victoria's George Corwin who is planning to include a major work — possibly the piano concerto — in the fall program.

Norman Hurrle (a former student) Christ Church Cathedral's Beal Thomas, and other Royal Canadian College of Organist members have works in hand.

It's regrettable that announcement of the centennial celebration was late in arriving in Victoria, making it awkward if not impossible to include performances in this winter's major series of concerts. At the moment it appears that the Healey Willan Year will be drawing to a close before there can be much public attention centred on it here.

There is a touch of irony in the situation because the only member of Willan's immediate family who does not live in Ontario — the youngest son, Patrick — lives in this city.

Mr.and Mrs. Willan recently returned from Toronto where they attended one of the signal events, the dedication of the Healey Willan Memorial Organ in the Church of St.Mary Magdalene where Willan was precentor (organist and music director) from 1921 to 1967.

Professional and amateur choirs, symphony orchestras, organists, festivals, composers and broadcasters are involved in the year-long celebration which takes all forms. It began in the first week of the year in Halifax and will encompass nine of the 10 provinces.

Willan came to Canada in 1913 with his wife Gladys. He left behind in his native England a reputation as a child prodigy (he was a church organist and choir director at the age of 11) and increasing recognition as a composer.

He came to Canada to head the theory department of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, became a lecturer and examiner for the University of Toronto, and held numerous other key positions including for eight years, that of organist and choirmaster of St.Paul's Anglican Church, and for six, that of musical director of Hart House Theatre. He was also organist and a professor of music at the University of Toronto.

Given to composing limericks and other bits of doggerel his portrait-epigram on himself is often quoted: Irish by extraction, English by birth, Canadian by adoption, Scotch by absorption.

His organ and choral works have enjoyed the widest popularity, being frequently performed both at home and abroad. But although he considered his opera, Deirdre, as his most important work, he usually regarded himself with a bit of tongue-in-cheek.

His refusal to be solemn about his music moved one friend to commemorate him with, Said Sir Ernest MacMillan/To Healey Willan: Healey —Really! And Keith MacMillan, Sir Ernest's son, summed him up with this limerick: There's a merry old Willan named Healey/From whose pen music flows rather freely;/But to friends it's his terse/And quite secular verse/Which cascades even more freely, really.

Dr. Healey Willan, dean of Canadian composers

Patrick Willan says that although his father was much occupied and away from home a great deal, he was a concerned and devoted parent to his chilren.

"He was a strict but fair disciplinarian and we all appreciated him for that."

The young people were not manoeuvred toward musical careers, Willan says. "My mother was a fine pianist but as she saw my father's career burgeoning she retired from active music-making, saying one professional musician in the family was enough. For the same reason she didn't encourage any of us to become musicians."

A former student of Healey Willan lives in Victoria. He is organist and choral director Norman Hurrle, who has many lively and fond memories of the master. Director of the Victoria Boys Chorus, Hurrle is planning performances of a number of Willan works. Among them some of the choral works and the two violin sonatas.

"At the consecration of Archdeacon Hewell Jones as Bishop of the Anglican diocese here, on May 1, a Willan mass will be performed," he says.

Hurrle is at present working with Amity Singers, preparing the Easter program they will present with guest conductor Brian Law, in Christ Church Cathedral.He hopes Amity next season, will include a program of the secular songs that have been republished for the centennial year.

"Dr. Willan had a great sense of occasion," says Hurrle. "That is why he much preferred the high church services of St. Mary Magdelene's.— he always said he loved to smell the incense. But he would have pooh-poohed the idea that such things were in the nature of inspiration."

When he was asked by a reporter what had inspired him to write his opera, Deirdre, Willan replied: "I was not inspired; I was commissioned by the CBC ... I do not believe in this inspirational bit. It's bunkum. The only inspiration you get is the desire to do a thing."

While Willan is a composer whose influences were strongly Victorian — Elgar, Vaughann Williams, Wagner — many musicians and music critics feel that much of his work, especially the choral and organ compositions, have established a firm and lasting place for themselves in our own century.

The late Joseph Bonnet, internationally noted French organist, considered Willan's Passacaglia and Fugue, the greatest work in that form since Bach.

There is in fact a distinguishable parallel between Willan and his towering predecessor. Like Bach he spent his most productive musical life in the church with which his name became so closely associated over nearly half a century. And like Bach he was a great organist and a remarkable improvisor.

"He always improvised the processionals for the Universty of Toronto convocations," says Hurrle. And as further illustration of his facility in composition, Hurrle recalls that, upon being elected president of his beloved Arts and Letters Club, he sat up all night with some chums (and other spirits) and set the entire club constitution to music!

It is Hurrle's opinion, concurred in by others, that he is a better composer of organ works than the German Max Reger. In fact says Hurrle, the Passacaglia and Fugue came about as a result of Willan's hearing Reger's Passacaglia in D minor, as a young man in England. A theme occurred to him on his way home on what he always described as "the Toonerville trolley," and during that summer he wrote a variation each way during his travels to and fro on the same trolley.

Elmer Iseler, noted former conductor of Toronto's Festival Singers and Mendelsohn Choir, in Victoria tonight with his own group, the Elmer Iseler Singers, was also a Willan student.

"I never missed one of Healey Willan's classes when I studied with him at the University of Toronto," says Iseler. "I also remember my time with him in the St.Mary Magdalene choir ... I always felt no one else played such a fluid organ ... and then there was his superb plainsong accompaniment. I believe Dr. Willan has been the only major influence on my choral directing."

Following his death on Feb.16, 1968, Willan's sons and daughter gathered together every scrap of memorabilia — letters, diplomas, manuscripts, tapes and photographs — amounting to 600 items, and turned them over to the National Library. The collection was added to from other sources and part of it formed an exhibition under the title, Healey Willan, the Man and His Music, at the National Library in 1972.

Healey Willan's music, according to expert opinion, reflects an intimate knowledge of plainsong chant and above all polished craftsmanship and a sense of fitness expressed in its suitability for religious worship, its treatment of the English language and of the human voice.

The composer himself described music as "my chosen profession, my relaxation and my hobby ... Music has been my chief delight, and if at any time I have been able to share that delight with others, I am content."

Actor Dustin Hoffman scurried from his plane into London's Heathrow Airport as Kramer vs. Kramer was set to open in London. Joking with reporters at the airport, Hoffman was asked if he was surprised that the movie was chosen for Britain's most important film showing attended by the Queen. "Not really. I heard it was a close thing between Kramer vs. Kramer and Deep Throat."

Merle Haggard has joined the growing ranks of country music singers who are writing their autobiographies. "We're about 10 chapters into the rough of it, and are planning to be finished by the summer, looking at a spring '81 release" Haggard said. Haggard, who spent about three years in prison for burglary, is best known for his 1969 hit, Okie from Muskogee.

Sylvester James, a popular disco singer, is in police custody in New York on charges of armed robbery and grand larceny in an alleged swindle of $55,000 worth of rare coins and cash from two coin dealers. James, 32, of San Francisco, who uses the stage name Sylvester, was arrested at his hotel after he allegedly met separately with the dealers under the pretense of investing money in coins or offering others for sale, police said.

A controversial dance in which a woman urinates on stage was allowed to go on at the publicly-financed Art Gallery of Ontario, although Reuben Baetz, provincial culture and recreation minister, thought it "grossly indecent." The work, by avant-garde Canadian choreographers Marie Choinard and Elizabeth Chitty, was recently censored at two Quebec universities. "Some might regard it as ho-hum," Baetz said. "But my personal feeling is that if a lady carries a yellow pail onto the stage and proceeds to pee in it, that is obscene." Baetz said he hoped in future gallery officials would exercise good taste in selection of shows. If such an incident recurred, he said, it would be incumbent on the province to intervene.

David Dukes, now starring on Broadway in Bent, has been signed for a major role in the film version of Lawrence Sanders' best-seller, The First Deadly Sin, in which he'll co-star with Frank Sinatra and Faye Dunaway ... Gretchen Wyler has just finished filming Private Benjamin in Paris for Warner Brothers ... Woody Herman will appear in a special George Wein concert March 30 at Carnegie Hall with Mel Torme and Anita O'Day ... Barry Bostwick joined Larry Hagman and Rosemarie Bowie Stack last week in Houston for a March of Dimes Gourmet Gala fundraiser ... Adrienne Barbeau will be in London and Amsterdam for the next two weeks to film a miniseries titled The Tourist for 20th Century Fox TV.

Colette premieres as season's finale

audrey johnson

It is better to count your assets than your chickens in the theatrical profession.

Belfry Theatre which had previously announced as a replacement for Arthur Miller's The Price, a new Arthur Kopit play, Wings, to star Sylvia Sidney, has found that Miss Sidney's shooting schedule on a current film is so far behind that the production date of April 10 in Victoria could not be met.

Resorting to a Belfry asset — flexibility — a new show has been acquired for the season's final spot, opening on the same date.

The show will constitute the west coast premiere of a hit musical play, Colette, the Colors of Love.

Colette received rave reviews, playing to sell-out audiences during its two-month run in Toronto. It is based on the life of the legendary French writer who is best known in this country as the author of Gigi.

An annual romance that survives for 25 years!

That's the story of Same Time Next Year, the lilting comedy by Canadian playwright Bernard Slade, coming to McPherson Playhouse Tuesday and Wednesday.

In the Vancouver Arts Club Theatre's acclaimed touring production the lovers are played by Linda Sorensen and LeRoy Schulz. It is directed by Arts Club Theatre's artistic director, Bill Millerd.

Sorensen is a versatile performer who has appeared in numerous feature films including The Breaking Point, Our Man Flint, McCabe and Mrs. Miller and in the soon to be released Stone Cold Dead. She wrote and produced the award winning television special, Christmas Lace, and has appeared on King of Kensington, House of Pride and The Great Detective.

Schulz, who originally studied at the Bristol Old Vic Theatre School appeared at Stratford, Ont., in the 1979 season's Henry IV, The Taming of the Shrew and King Lear.

While living in Vancouver Schulz has played with Vancouver Playhouse, City Stage, Carousel Theatre, Frederic Wood Theatre and Bastion Theatre in Victoria.

A relatively new and highly individual group, The Nylons, (one size fits all) will be giving a benefit concert for Kaleidoscope Theatre, Sunday night at The Belfry.

The Nylons is a quartet of choir-calibre voices that specializes in a capella (without instrumental accompaniment) singing.

Toronto based, all four are actors as well as singers. They have created a style they call "future-primitive", singing a fusion of gospel-to-current music, improvising their on-stage routines and getting involved with the audience.

They come to town fresh from a three week stint at Vancouver's East Cultural Centre and two recent TV appearances.

Former Victoria actor-director-designer John Heath, is back with Bastion Theatre, currently directing the successful season's wind-up production, Jitters.

The second of two Canadian plays offered this season, Jitters is by David French, possibly Canada's most successful playwright. Rave reviews greeted the play at the famous Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven and the New York Times hailed it as "an almost perfect comedy of its kind.

It opens at the McPherson Playhouse April 4.

Something unique in the way of concerts comes up today in University of Victoria Music Building's recital hall at 8 p.m..

Would you believe flower pots, brake drums and coffee pots?

This event, free and open to the public, is a presentation of the UVic Percussion Ensemble. A featured work on the program is Lou Harrison's Concerto for Violin with Percussion Orchestra. The solo violinist is Susan Eddlemon, assistant concert master of the Victoria Symphony, who is in the process of completing her doctorate in music through New York's Juilliard School.

Also performing are UVic faculty members Lanny Pollet, flute; Louis Ranger, trumpet; Linda Hougland-Daniels, cello; Eugene Dowling, tuba, and Thomas Eadie, trombone.

The program also includes works by Alan Hovhanesss, Paul Creston, Jonathan Bruce Brown, Daniel Scheidt and Robert Kogan.

The ensemble is conducted by J. Scott Eddlemon, percussion instructor in the School of Music and principal percussion with the Victoria Symphony.

More pure Canadiana!

Stringband, without doubt according to its publicists, Canada's hottest folk band, will be presented by the McPherson Playhouse Foundation in concert at the Mac, Monday March 31.

Their most recent record album is quizzically patriotic in title: The Maple Leaf Dog.

According to band leader Bob Bossin, subjects for their songs are always available: "mail strikes, the Wobbly who tried to unionize the cowboys, growing up in Toronto, growing old on the prairies, the dog that saved Sir Wilfred Laurier. It's good times/hard times music ... we play songs that picked us to sing them."

Incicentally, Elizabeth Gorrie, artistic director of Kaleidoscope is in Toronto directing her adaptation of The Snow Goose at the invitation of the Young People's Theatre Centre. This is the second run for Elizabeth Gorrie and The Snow Goose. In November 1978 Gorrie was invited to Tel Aviv to direct the play for the Israel National Theatre for Children and Youth.

Weekend reminder for music lovers. The Elmer Iseler Singers who rate among the very best in Canadian choral singing, are at University Centre Auditorium tonight. Their program will be far-ranging for they are as adept at performing Bach as Acadian folk songs.

Dr.Iseler was a recent guest conductor with Victoria Symphony and Amity Singers.

On Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, there will be a chamber concert by the Ars Nova Ensemble.

Larry de la Haye, clarinet, and Mary Humphreys, piano, will have as guest artist, Adele Lewis, in a program of works by Mozart, Arnold, Cooke, Schubert and Bliss.

By ISAAC WILLIAMS

One of the biggest problems facing many Canadian performers is their own lack of identity. International artists establish an image that goes beyond their music. Most of us have images of Rod Stewart, The Rolling Stones, Abba and Paul McCartney. As well, many people have images of The Clash, Elvis Costello, Ian Drury and Bob Marley. These images come from sources outside of their music; from T.V., magazines and gossip. Very few people gossip about Canadian artists, and the T.V. and print medias try so earnestly to make stars out of every native performer that few people pay any attention to what they say. This all leads up to an excellent Canadian singer with a strong image problem, Ray Materick. Very few people know of him and even fewer know that he is a Canadian artist.

Over the past month I have played two of his albums, Midnight Matinee and Fever in Rio, to a number of people and the response was unanimous; "That's great, I've heard that before somewhere, and who is it". Even though both albums have received sporadic airplay, the name Ray Materick might as well be Ray Who, as far as sales are concerned. Materick does not help identify himself either. The album jackets state only that the records were recorded in Hamilton. His song imagery deals with New York, California and Mexico, so it is easy to mistake him for another L.A. cowboy, riding the same herd as John Prine, David Bromberg and Michael Murphy. Although he appeals to a similar audience, two things separate Materick from the Los Angeles scene. His music is more rock than folk influenced and he has a full time band instead of the loose grouping of session players that characterise L.A. recordings.

Midnight Matinee features a number of different styles that for the most part are executed brilliantly. There are a couple of ballads that are saved from becoming mundane by their sincerity. There is a drunken good time song that produces a few laughs. There is also a classic production number called Storm Warning. This song comes close to equalling The Door's masterpiece Riders on the Storm, and it is worth the price of the album. The other songs make up the heart of the album and are about life on the road, being a rambler and a romantic drifter. Not original but the light, easy beat and the vivid images make the songs enjoyable. This is the kind of album you can play for someone who's musical tastes you are not sure of, as there is enough variety to please everybody.

Fever in Rio, released last year, is generally more uptempo and uniform than the earlier album, but the biggest change is in the performance of the band. On the first album they played like backing musicians, with good solos when needed. On the new album Materick and group play together as a band. Materick writes and sings and the band brings life to the songs. The development from Midnight Matinee to Fever in Rio makes me look forward to the next Ray Materick record, and he is one of the few Canadians that I can get enthused about in their development as an artist. Too often Canadian performers start well only to slide downhill chasing radio play and the American market. My only complaint against Materick is his choice of song settings. I am tired of songs about California and New York. It is time for some Canadian settings, like Wawa, Moose Factory or Mississauga. Time to make up some new rhymes.

By LEONARD FEATHER
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — "Andrew Hill is one of the most articulate and adventurous musicians of our time. As composer and pianist, he displays a sensitivity, a feeling for contrast that I find all too rarely among his contemporaries. What will he be doing in 1980 if he continues to evolve at his present pace? The prospect is fascinating to contemplate."

I wrote those words in 1969, when 1980 was the beat of a distant drum. Recently, receiving a new album by the Haiti-born, Chicago-raised pianist, I attempted to call him and found he has no telephone. Always somewhat reclusive and never one to compromise in the interest of material rewards, Hill has enjoyed the respect only of a small coterie of critics and musicians. The outcome apparently has not lived up to the 1969 prospect.

From California With Love (Artists House AH 9) consists of two long unaccompanied improvisations, each taking up an entire side of the album. In his notes, Hill comments: "While making this record I had a fear — had I lost the energy and conception that New York City is allegedly supposed to give an artist?" He concludes, however, that the LP is "equal or superior to anything on the market" and characterizes his music as "interesting ... happy ... warm. There was an angry period, but you get tired of pounding the piano."

Music)such as Hill's, which at first is rough going, has qualities (interesting, happy, warm, as he put it) that place it on a higher level than that of, say, Cecil Taylor, whom I have always found less accessible, although he presently has far more of an audience than Hill. Like Taylor, Hill has been recording off and on since the 1950s; unlike him, he relies more on subtlety than energy, and has reaped precious few rewards. For those willing to make an investment of serious listening time, this is a five-star item. Obtainable for $7,00 from Artists House, 40 West 37th St., New York, N.Y. 10018.

Hill's concern about the debilitating effects of living in California is refuted in another new piano recital, Jack Wilson's Margo's Theme (Discovery DS-805). Wilson had a second problem to contend with that was far more serious than the Southern California lifestyle: soon after the release of his last album, he suffered severe injuries in an automobile accident, not the least of which was a fractured left hand.

Months of great pain, the loss of 35 pounds, and a long convalescence were clouded by the fear that his chops might be permanently impeded. Amazingly, Wilson has bounced back with an album that is at least the equal of anything he has done.

As has long been his custom, he favors a simultaneous two-piano technique, often playing the melody in unison on Fender Rhodes electric with the left hand and Mason Hamlin grand with the right. This is done to devastating effect on He That Muremureth, an original tune based on the chord pattern of Night and Day.

Backed by bass and drums, Wilson cruises through this set of standards and originals with a confidence he probably never expected to regain. Four and a half stars.

NFB Academy Award films to be shown free on Sunday

Jane Fonda won't be there — and it's unlikely Pandora will be clogged with limos — but this Sunday the National Film Board will present a pre-Oscar Awards night at the McPherson Playhouse.

All four NFB nominees will be shown, starting at 7:30 p.m. Showing time for the four films will be approximately 2½ hours.

The public is invited to this free film evening. Seats will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

The four productions nominated for Hollywood's coveted Oscar are: Going the Distance, in the category of feature-length documentary; Every Child, for best animated short film; Nails, for best documentary short film; and Bravery in the Field, for best live-action short film.

Directed by Paul Cowan, Going the Distance is the board's official film on the Commonwealth Games held in Edmonton in the summer of 1978. This documentary film lasts ninety minutes.

Every Child, directed by Eugene Fedorenko, is Canada's contribution to an hour-long UNICEF production made in celebration of the International Year of the Child. This six-minute, animated film illustrates one of the ten Principles of the Declaration of the Rights of the Child.

Produced by the NFB's regional office in B.C., Nails traces the evolution of nail production from the days when it was an individual skill through to modern, automated manufacturing.

Bravery in the Field revolves around Remembrance Day and a violent confrontation between a lonely Second World War veteran and a young unemployed street "punk." The film was directed by Giles Walker.

Coppola's new venture

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie producer Francis Ford Coppola, infusing what he calls "the best of the old studio system" with $5 million and the technological wizardry of the '80s, is launching Zoetrope Studios.

At a news conference , the creator of such cinema landmarks as The Godfather and Apocalypse Now, emphasized that technology will distinguish his studio from those of the past.

"I want to create a permanent studio with artists and techicians working together on a continuing basis," he said.

Towards that end, he said, the company will adopt the traditional department-head concept and has signed its first contract players. But unlike the old studio system, Zoetrope talent will contract on a non-exclusive basis.

"We don't buy and sell the people working here," said Coppola, in reference to the studio system of the 1930s and '40s in which players were told everything from who to date to where to vacation.

He said his role will be as "a form of artistic director, not unlike that of a repertory company" heading an "exciting collaborative brand of people interested in the same thing."

Sharing top creative responsibility with Coppola will be Bernard Gersten, a former associate producer of the New York Shakespeare Festival, and Lucy Fisher, former production vice-president for 20th Century-Fox.

Handling the finances will be Robert Spiotta, a former Mobil Oil Co. executive.

the galleries

A first Victoria one-man showing of the drawings and paintings of Lance Olsen opens Sunday at Kyle's Gallery, 1545 Fort. The preview hours are from noon to 10 p.m.and the show continues through April 10.

Formerly on the curatorial staff of the Surrey Art Centre, and instructor in painting, drawing and printmaking there, Olsen's work has been shown at the Burnaby Art Gallery and Surrey Art Centre, and his ceramic work at Presentation House and Handcraft House in North Vancouver.

Born in London, England, Olsen studied drawing and printmaking at Camberwell Art School. He emigrated to Canada in 1968. In 1972 he represented Canada at important international print exhibitions and in 1974 at the 5th Bienniel of Graphics in Krakow, Poland.

The artist's most recent drawings,on view in this show, centre around the human form. He has produced drawings in which line is the most important expressive element and carrier of emotion.

His humanistic concerns are carried into several of his oil paintings where, at times, the darker side of man's anguish is exposed. Gouache paintings in the show are brimming over with lava-like color.

Graduating students of the University of Victoria visual arts department, are exhibiting work in a show that opens Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery at University Centre.

The show is entitled Majors I and will continue on view through April 10. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Backroom Gallery is commemorating the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Royal Canadian Academy with a showing of works by Victoria members of the Academy.

Included are Maxwell Bates, Pat Martin Bates, James Gordaneer, Don Harvey, Glen Howarth, Flemming Jorgensen, Myfanwy Pavelic, Herbert Siebner, Jack Wilkinson and Jack Wise.

The exhibition opens Sunday at the Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay. Hours are 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. It will continue through April 19.

Footnote: People who have visited the showing of American painting at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, say that it is a definite must-see — a wide-ranging very impressive show, both in quality and scale.

Lena Horne retires

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Lena Horne, the velvet-voiced singer who at 63 is still considered one of the world's 10 most beautiful women, will retire later this month from nightclub entertainment.

Her retirement was announced to a stunned crowd Thursday night in the Fairmont Hotel's Venetian Room where she began a two-week stint.

Miss Horne announced her retirement once before, but later went back on the supper club circuit anyway, apparently drawn by the money.

Her last movie was The Wiz, an all-black film last year in which she had a small part. In recent years she has had few television appearances, but drew admiring crowds in the clubs.

Her 47 years in show business began in the 1930s as a dancer in Harlem.

TRAVEL

The diary of an insecure traveller

By BILL HAGEN

NEW YORK — Even in this technological age, travel still seems to be the most popular means for getting from one place to another.

But let me tell you, it's far from perfect.

Take air travel, if you must. Fraught with hidden menaces, it is, especially for the novice traveller. And none of them has to do with fear of flying.

There is, for example, the wait for departure, which frequently can be "prolonged." When it comes to being on schedule, your chances are often about as good as they would be if you made the journey by rickshaw. Air travel is one of the few businesses I know of—the postal service may be another—in which congratulations are passed around for managing to be only an hour or so late.

Well, something is needed to while away this unexpected free time. A newspaper and a coffee shop, to cite a possibility.

Enter the coffee shop, reading material in hand. Accept immediate seating at the counter, rather than wait for a table.

Your spirits are high, for you are going somewhere. Eventually. You order coffee, which for some perverse reason is equally divided between cup and saucer. Sitting a stool away —it's a tenet of travel that you never sit directly next to anyone if it can be avoided—is another traveller. In front of him is the non-dairy creamer and sugar. He is reading.

"Pardon me, would you please pass the sugar?"

"Unhh."

With the precision of a barroom shuffleboard whiz, and without looking, he slides the sugar to you.

"Thanks."

"Unhh."

His rapt attention to what he is reading gives rise to a new fear: Whatever you are reading, it's wrong. Dotted throughout the coffee shop, indeed throughout the terminal, are other readers, many of them pale girls wearing headbands. You find yourself trying to read the titles of what they are reading, but what you're reading holds no interest for them. They never look up.

To feel less inadequate in this matter, take with you, say, a slender tome by Camus. Lower the book occasionally, as if committing something to memory. At other times look up quickly and nod sagely. It works until you notice that everyone else is reading Scruples. Then you may again feel inadequate.

While reading, you will, if you smoke, grope for a cigarette. Rest assured it will be the wrong brand, yet another little embarrassment.

You'll feel that everyone in the airport is more widely travelled than you, and you'll be right. It's one of the miracles of travel, that everyone has been to more places than you.

And there is a similar miracle. If anyone designs to talk to you, or if you dare talk to anyone, you will learn that their bag is always the last one unloaded from the plane. It's true. Everyone's bag is always the last one unloaded. Unless there are two bags involved. Then one of them is the first unloaded.

When finally you board and the flight is under way, try not to become upset when you notice that other passengers are getting better service than you. Yes, another miracle. Everyone gets better service than everyone else, at least in the eyes of the insecure beholder. Hmmm, he has two pats of butter. And he has what looks like a peach melba for dessert, and I have a 32-pound brownie that's melted to the plate. The plastic plate. And my plastic coffee cup leaks.

Above all, keep a lid on your exuberance. Don't volunteer any information, don't seek any. Don't, for instance, make this mistake:

"Hi, there. Looks like we're seatmates. Where are you going?"

"New York."

"Hey, no kidding. Me, too."

This is said with small-world wonderment.

"Indeed," replies your new-found friend, turning away never to turn back until the plane lands.

There are no stops planned between your departure point and New York. It's what we jaded travellers call a direct flight. Less than a miracle, then, that we will all wind up in the same place. Late, but at the same place.

Now my business here draws to a close, and it's time to travel again.

Nothing left to do but arrange my copy of The Prophet so it can be seen from the pocket of my coat. You live and learn.

A gem you may already know about

In the "it had to happen department" this week how about this one from Hollywood International Tours in Los Angeles.

They are offering you your very own psychic cruise on board the Tss Carnivale leaving from Miami September 14.

The "unique cruise" is headed by two reputedly renowned and accredited psychics from Southern California in Leslie Newman and Gloria Perri who will lecture their way to Samana in the Dominican Republic; San Juan, Puerto Rico; and St. Croix in the Virgin Islands.

There'll be guidance on everything from tarot card reading to life force reading, but as they say in the psychic business, you probably already knew all that.

THOSE FLORIDA folk are no slugs when it comes to promotion. They easily win the weekly mail derby with propaganda from their sunshine haven and are quick to latch onto an idea.

Everyone loves a Canadian it seems right now, which is more than can be said for the Canadian dollar.

Latest in the mutual adoration stakes came from the Pinellas Suncoast—eight Gulf of Mexico beach communities with names such as Clearwater Beach, Holiday Isles and Treasure Island—which declared February 14, St. Valentines Day, as "We Love Canadians Day."

As the picture (RIGHT) shows, we may be forever indebted to the Ayatollah.

ANOTHER FROM the Canada we love you saga. NBC made its studio tours in Burbank, Calif., free to Canadians for all of March. Unfortunately, the announcement from Eba Hawkins, director of guest relations for NBC, only came this week or you would have been told in time to do something about the free offer.

Travel Update

IT'S SO NICE Super Summer 80* is the message from Nova Scotia in a tidy package of information about the province's most ambitious program of entertainment, tradition, culture and history ever crammed into one summer.

Three special events are being marked—a "spectacular Nova Scotia tattoo; the 75th anniversary of the Canadian Navy, which the tattoo marks (wonder if anything is scheduled for Esquimalt); and the 375th anniversary of the founding of Port Royal, the oldest permanent settlement in North America, north of Florida.

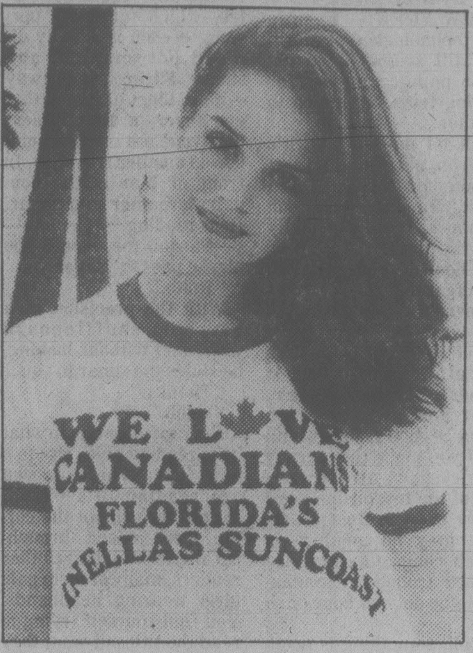
The tattoo and navy celebration are set for the first week of July in the Halifax metropolitan area, and the Acadian celebrations marking the anniversary of Port Royal will take place throughout the province over the summer months.

YOU ASKED FOR IT, but it seems we got it. The Canadian Government Office of Tourism sent our way the first issue of Canada Tourism, a revamped version of predecessors in the travel newsheet business.

It's sent to those in the travel trade and apparently the revised, smaller, one language (there's a separate French edition) publication is what the trade asked for.

The You Asked For It headline on the front tells how the office responded to a reader survey and produced a better publication.

There's an article on front too which predicts 1980 should be one of the most successful years in Canadian tourism history. The director general of tourism marketing for CGOT, Roland Boire, added a proviso, however, "provided there are no further problems of energy availability."



The good year hopes are apparently pinned on the low value of the Canadian dollar as against the United States version. This encouraged Canadians to take holidays at home in 1979 and was expected to be even more pronounced this year. To cap things off, the low dollar is expected to attract foreign tourists here in droves.

AND IN CASE you missed it. The Alliance of Canadian Travel Associations has declared April 12 till May 9 Travel Canada Month. There will be a month-long series of promotional activities aimed at encouraging Canadians to stop home in Canada this vacation.

Cheaper London nights no myth

A recent government survey of London hotels has revealed that over 250 small hotels, inns and guest houses offer a comfortable bed and a full English breakfast for between $9 and $19 a night.

The results of this survey have now been published in an authoritative guide to inexpensive accommodation, which tells the value-conscious visitor exactly where to stay, and where to eat, in central and outer London.

Shoppers and theatregoers on a budget can reside in London's west end for as little as $15 a night. Executives can use hotel conference facilities for 25 or more people for less than $25 per person per day. Students and clubs can stay at hotels, which specialize in group accommodation, for under $9 a night. Prices include a substantial breakfast and are even less when two people share a room.

The guide lists only hotels which are registered with the English Tourist Board. It states maximum and minimum prices for each hotel and exactly what amenities are provided. Everything is included, from the size of the beds and number of parking spaces to the hotel tennis courts and credit card facilities. There is even a symbol for early morning tea, and those two essentials for the North American aboard private baths and central heating are dutifully recorded throughout.

To complete the budget picture the new guide also contains a comprehensive directory of restaurants in central London, classified by price.

The guide, complete with subway map, is a quick and reliable reference for today's London visitor. It takes the guesswork out of budget travel.

Copies of Hotels and Restaurants in London, 1980 are available for $5 (plus $1 for postage) from Sue Unwin, Box 8878, Moscow, Idaho 83843.

"akamai"

(Hawaiian word for clever or smart)

Most kama'ainas (oldtimers or native Hawaiians) agree that malihinis (newcomers to Hawaii) who fly to their islands in the summer with Holidays by Wardair have plenty akamai.

Why? Because Wardair gives you more value for your money and because summer is the most economical time to visit Hawaii.

Holidays by Wardair can book your ABC flight, arrange hotel accommodation to suit your budget at one of 48 hotels and even look after your car rental.

During the flight, you'll enjoy "Wardair Class" service—delicious meals, individually served, hot from the galley with imported wines and liqueurs—all at no additional cost.

And after you arrive in Hawaii, the "Wardair Class" treatment doesn't stop. There are three Holidays by Wardair service centres in Waikiki to help you book tours and shows, answer your questions and show you how to save money on sight-seeing, shopping and dining.

In fact, Holidays by Wardair makes malihinis feel like Kama'ainas in no time at all. So this summer, be akamai . . . fly Wardair Class to . . .

TRAVEL

Now where have all the nudists, gods, and palmists gone?

AROUND the WORLD with STAN DELAPLANE

OJAI, Calif. — All of South California was washing away when I set off to see the Ojai again. Rain fell by the bucketful. I had a rented Pinto with hardly enough power to run a sewing machine.

On the inland highway from Los Angeles, stronger cars whizzed past splashing us with great sheets of water. We kept the radio going for weather reports.

"The coast highway at Malibu is closed by slides. Police ask that only residents enter Topanga Canyon." And on and on.

So under the dripping night sky, we drove into Ventura the San Buenaventura of Padre Serra's days. The little priest from Spain, from the island of Mallorca, walked the brown grass length of California.

He founded a mission here. And the ox cart road from Mexico to San Francisco was known grandly as El Camino Real. The Royal Highway.

Today it's Highway 101. Bypasses towns like Ventura. But we swung off and, after asking at a roadside diner, found the way to Pierpont Inn.

It's a modern looking hotel. Spread over a lot of ground for the original building went up in 1908 when land was cheap. The bar is cozy. The food is excellent. The bill next morning (rooms, cocktails, dinner and breakfast for two) was $68.

(I don't know why I print these things. Next time I come around, the place is full and I can't get a room. However, I've got a heart like warm butter.)

In the morning, we drove over to Ojai. If you live here as I did in my salad days you call it "The Ojai."

The little town has grown some. But it has much of the same small town charm.

In a long ago time, Annie Besant, the Theosophist leader, discovered Ojai. She likewise discovered that it was the magnetic centre of the earth the place where the new Messiah would live.

Naturally, this brought a great gathering of soothsayers—the Theosophists worked a lot with astrology and numerology and such. (There was one man who would read your future by listening to your stomach.) There were many palm readers.

I lived here and learned a lot about astrology and numbers and mitt reading.

I became acquainted with a former rewrite man from the New York tabloids who ate nothing but nuts. He said all other foods were poison.

I met so many nudists that it was shocking to go into town and see people wearing clothes.

I met a whole German dance group who would only dance without clothes.

There was a gentleman who played excellent chess. He was hipped on the idea that grocery stores cheated people.

He would go into a grocery. Buy a loaf of bread. Then he would squeeze it down until it was the size of a baseball and cry to the customers:

"There is your loaf of bread! That is how they cheat you!"

Naturally, stores got wise to this. And he had to go long distances to find a new one where they did not give him the heave-ho.

He also stripped the outer leaves from a head of lettuce. Then he would throw back the heart, saying contemptuously:

"You cheaters! The outside leaves are the only ones that nourish you."

A number of lesser gods filtered in. The rewrite man announced one day that he was the anti-Christ. He quit eating nuts and began polishing off steaks.

One of the lesser deities weighed 300 pounds.

He insisted his followers feed him in a hammock.

One of the colony was ostracized because his horoscope came up showing he was a sex fiend. He was a mild-mannered person. But after reading his chart, they said he must be faking those nice manners. Underneath he was a tiger.

Anyway, I stopped for awhile. But the nudists and palmists and the gods of yesteryear seemed to have gone.

Ojai nowadays features an orange packing plant tour. A weak substitute after you've lived on Olympus.

Ojai Valley Inn. Plush and expensive. Golf course and tennis courts. Bar and restaurant. On summer days, you have lunch under sun umbrellas on the patio, $8. A half dozen small motels on the edge of town. Three looked fairly good.

Bart's Corner, a block off the main street, is one of the most interesting bookshops. The OUTSIDE walls are bookshelves stacked with used paperbacks. Inside full of used books in catalogued shelves. Owners know where everything is and I think you could find ANY book published since 1900 in here.

From Ojai, turn right on a marked road that takes you along the winding creek through the wild Los Padres National Forest. It's two million acres of primitive land. Little streams, chilled by mountain snow. Mile-high deserts of gray sage. Pine trees and river sycamores hung with green mistletoe.

Not many people find it. It's worth the trip.

Why the Hyatt Regency Vancouver and the Bayshore Inn have cut winter rates by one-third.

December through March are pleasantly mild winter months in Vancouver. They are also our "slow" months. So, to encourage your visit, we're offering a splendid inducement: one-third off our usual room rates.

With all due respect to the Bayshore, we believe the Hyatt Regency offers even more of an inducement than our friends up the road.

Because their special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel out near tranquil Stanley Park. But our special winter rate gets you a luxurious room with a beautiful view at a fine hotel right in the heart of exciting downtown Vancouver. So you're steps—not taxi rides—from the city's best shopping, nightlife, restaurants, galleries, theatres and business addresses. And, because our room rates are priced a little lower than the Bayshore's year-round, one-third off ours is less expensive than one-third off theirs. Come discover Vancouver in winter. The only thing "off-season" about us is the price!

Suva shopowners are fiercely competitive and haggling is name of the game

By ALAN HARMAN

SUVA, Fiji (CP) — There's no room for argument: If you want to haggle, duty free shopping in Fiji can produce some of the best bargains going.

It's equally true that if you don't do some hard bargaining the price can be twice what the shops were prepared to sell an item for.

Nobody seems to know just how many duty free shops there are, but every community centre is dominated by them.

Rajendra Singh, a salesman in one of the shops, is a veteran in the art of bargaining.

A tourist asks to look at a watch bearing a price tag of $280.

"How much?" the potential customer asks, ignoring the tag.

Singh reaches for the ever-present calculator and taps away. He comes up with a figure and frowns.

"I can give you that watch for $120," he says, the look on his face suggesting that he really believes he is giving it away.

The tourist offers $70.

Singh looks at the ceiling. He laughs, he sighs, he grabs his calculator and pounds away.

"My best offer—$100!"

The haggling continues until the tourist decides to go elsewhere to look around and heads for the door.

Singh follows. "Wait a moment," he says. He talks rapidly in Hindi to someone else in the shop. He comes back wearing a frown.

"OK. We won't make any money. But we like you. You pay $80."

A deal has been struck and it has only taken three hours.

The tourist later learned that the shop actually made $5 on the deal. It's about the average profit for a duty-free dealer on a sale in this price range.

> 'Main towns outside Suva have more duty free shops than any other kind'

Scenes such as this are repeated hundreds of times a day throughout Fiji. But there are horror stories of visitors walking into a shop and immediately paying the price on the tag.

The major centres outside of this capital city—Nadi, Lautoka and Sigatoka—have more duty-free shops than any other kind.

Competition is fierce and many of the shops have touts whose job is to lure the shoppers into a particular store.

The haggling is not confined to the visitors. Locals say they too have to battle to get the prices down.

"It can be tiresome and frustrating, but it's the only way to get a bargain," one local said. "You have to be in the mood for this kind of shopping."

The best bargains are in watches, cameras, stereo equipment, calculators and jewelry. Many of the prices are less than half the equivalent cost in Canada.

The only items that can't be bought duty-free at these shops are cigarettes and liquor, which have to be bought at the duty-free shops at Fiji's two international airports.

Strangely, in Fiji these are not bargains. The neighboring islands of Western Samoa and American Samoa offer much better prices for cigarettes and liquor.

Another bargaining tactic, for those with a few days to spare, is to ask the merchant for the shop's card. Whatever the last price the merchant offers is, he writes it down—less $5.

This card can be shown to another shop and the tactic used until merchants lose interest. When this happens the shopper knows he has reached the bottom limit.

The island's four duty-free merchants associations have 100 members. Tourism officials recommend these shops because there is redress if the shopper finds he has been overcharged or the merchandise is unsatisfactory.

But Kishore Gandhi, secretary of the Suva Duty Free Dealers Association, says there must be 10 times as many shops that are not members.

Although tourists generally accept that Suva has the highest prices, there is some debate about where the lowest prices can be found.

But a longtime resident says:

"Where someone thinks he got the best deal, that's the best place for duty-free shopping. It doesn't matter that somebody else got a better deal elsewhere."

'France now has one of finest railway systems in world'

French rail on the right track

PARIS (AP) — From the moment the first train pulled out of Paris, bearing Queen Marie-Amelie on the 21-kilometre trip to St. Germain on Aug. 27, 1837, the French knew they were on to something.

The intervening 142 years have done little to change that view, and France now possesses one of the finest rail systems in the world.

"The railway is, and must remain, an essential factor in our system of transportation," says Transport Minister Joel le Theule. "The government, for its part, believes in the future of the railway and shows it by its enormous subsidies."

The state-run railway, the Societe Nationale des Chemins de Fer Francais, commonly known as the SNCF, had total operating expenses in 1978 of $8.35 billion.

In fact, France spends as much on the railways as it does on building and maintaining its highways.

Apart from a reputation for serving the worst food to be had in this land of gastronomes, French trains are comfortable and nearly always on time and offer a wide range of services and fare reductions.

The trains have a computerized ticket and reservation system hooked into most major travel agencies, facilities to rent a hotel room, a car or even a bicycle. Some lines can carry cars. The SNCF will pick up baggage at home and deliver it to a destination. It offers special help to the handicapped and even provides companions for children travelling alone.

The list of special fares is almost endless, some reductions ranging up to 75 per cent and including price cuts for soldiers, retirees, veterans, large families, families travelling together, even couples in some cases.

Most major European countries have some sort of fare-reduction plan. In West Germany and Sweden, almost everyone qualifies in some way or another for special fares. In Britain, where fares were raised by 20 per cent last month, pensioners and families still get price breaks.

After 10 years of steady increase, the number of riders on French trains was stagnant in 1979 in spite of another oil crunch, said Pierre Gentil, SNCF director-general.

That contrasts with Britain, West Germany and Sweden, all of which report ridership increases.

Painstaking business in potters' paradise

WONDERFUL WEDGWOOD

Delicate patterns are painted on bone china; figures are modelled on a Jasperware bowl; and a vase springs into being on a potter's wheel at the Wedgwood factory at Stoke-On-Trent in England

By KEN HUDSON

STOKE - ON - TRENT, England — With a steady hand, June Tooth dipped her fine brush into a paste of liquid gold and began tracing a fine line on a translucent bone china plate.

When finished, this plate would sell for more than $200.

It was not a special commemorative item, nor was it a special custom order—it was just part of a set for a service of eight or 12 or whatever number some unknown person who prefers the finer things of life would buy.

We found Tooth on the ground floor of a modern building at Barlaston, a smallish suburb of Stoke-On-Trent, which is the porcelain manufacturing centre of the Western world.

Literally hundreds, some say thousands, of pottery-makers have their factories here. But it wasn't Josiah Wedgwood, considered the father of English potters, who first discovered the unique clays of this Staffordshire city in the rolling English Midlands.

The Romans made pottery here during several centuries of occupation, we were told by Lynn Miller, a British girl whose complexion matches the delicacy of Wedgwood china.

She led the way through a museum that displays the history of Wedgwood to best advantage and shared with us a great deal of fascinating information about the industry.

In 1770, for example, Catherine the Great of Russia ordered a 952-piece dinnerware set from Wedgwood that had 1,224 individual English landscapes portrayed.

More than 800 pieces of that set can be seen at the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad.

Wedgwood is but one of the famous china-making firms here but it gets the major share of attention because the company encourages visitors.

Wedgwood has had a public museum since 1906, our guide explained as she very gently removed from a glass case one of the four remaining vases that Josiah Wedgwood himself made.

The firm's interest in tourism, reflected by the museum and a public demonstration area, has brought it a special award from the British Tourist Authority.

Wedgwood is best known to North Americans as that powder blue pottery with raised white figures called Jasperware.

It actually is made in a variety of colors, a darker blue, yellow, green, lilac or black and the hues come from the oxides in the soil. But this also is the centre of English porcelain, thus Wedgwood produces fine bone china as do the other factories whose tableware graces the dining boards of royalty and the wealthy.

Royal Doulton is made here and so is Spode and dozens of other famous and not-so-famous names in the field.

Tooth and a couple of dozen other Wedgwood workers operate in the special demonstration area that was put in for the benefit of visitors. The whole delicate and time-consuming process of making fine china is shown there.

But on other floors in the same building, with a background of soft music, hundreds of girls and women, row after row of them, can be seen hand painting a wide variety of pieces of china, just as Tooth was doing.

It is tedious and painstaking work requiring conformity from piece to piece—there is no room for individual artistic expression.

Occasionally, these painters of fine pottery talk quietly and laugh with one another but mostly they concentrate on what they are doing. They are paid on a piecework basis and they don't want to make mistakes.

Elsewhere, potters hand-shape bowls and vases and some 200 other items that are created here.

Among that array in the Jasperware that is a Wedgwood trademark, there have been such odd pieces as ink pots, spittoons, buttons, watch fobs, belt buckles, sword hilts, clock pendulums, combs and even high heels for ladies' shoes.

In the Wedgwood cafeteria for guests and executives, silverware is kept in Jasperware bowls that sell for $40 to $50 in the United States.

Bone China is actually made with bone, which may surprise many, said Howard Firth, assistant public relations director for Wedgwood, who kindly provided a rare tour of the company's actual production and design areas.

Ox bone is reduced to a fine ash and added to other materials to give china its whiteness and translucency and, above all, its amazing strength.

A shopkeeper demonstrated that strength by putting planks on four standard Wedgwood bone china teacups and then lowering a British tank onto the planks. The four cups withstood a total weight of 12.6 tons.

As a tourist mecca, Stoke-On-Trent is not exactly one of the garden spots of the world, but there are some good hotels and restaurants—and some of those fine English gathering spots, the pubs.

There is no hesitation in recommending the North Stafford Hotel, formerly one of the British Railways hostelries and now part of the Trust Houses Forte hotel group.

There are displays of locally produced china at the hotel and in the excellent dining room, meals are served on delicate Royal Doulton.

Fuel-saving traffic signals tried in U.S. urban project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. transportation department has begun a project to synchronize traffic signals on urban streets in as many as 20 cities, a move it estimated could save 100,000 barrels of oil a day.

The department's federal highway administration will select 10 to 20 cities to participate in the project, in which training and technical assistance would be provided in the use of computers to synchronize traffic lights.

Deputy federal highway administrator John Hassell Jr. said his agency has received a large number of complaints about the waste of fuel caused by inefficient operation of traffic signals.

"Too many of these complaints are well founded," he said. "We believe that the simple, low-cost measure of traffic signal progression improvements, if implemented nationwide, would reduce fuel consumption in the United States by 100,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

"In addition, transit, truck and automobile traffic flow would be improved by reducing stops and delays on urban streets."

Traffic engineers in the past relied on cumbersome manual trial-and-error methods to develop timing plans that become obsolete as soon as traffic patterns change, department officials said.

Most timing plans have not been kept up to date because traffic engineers do not have sufficient time and staff to continuously update them, they said.

Ants squeal on seed thief

LARISSA, Greece (UPI) — Ants in the nearby village of Prodromos exposed the theft of $1.2 million worth of sesame seeds, police said Friday.

The seeds were stolen last August from a Larissa candy manufacturer, and police were stumped until Prodromos villagers noticed a line of ants busily carrying sesame seeds from a village warehouse.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Hunting law false: Indian

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Williams's decision not to charge native Indians who hunt or fish out of season means nothing because conservation officers still are being told to lay charges, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said Friday.

The order, issued to Crown prosecutors, instructs them not to lay charges except with the attorney-general's permission.

The directive also was sent to senior members of the fish and wildlife branch and B.C.'s 110 conservation officers, who were angered by what they call the discriminatory nature of the order. A senior branch official says conservation officers will proceed normally and charge anyone who violates the Wildlife Act.

Union president George Manuel said the branch official's confirmation that officers will continue charging native Indians "proves that nothing has changed."

"Indian people are continuing to be harassed despite the fact that the attorney-general has ordered this racist treatment to stop," Manuel said. "Clearly the order given by Allan Williams to drop these cases suggests that the B.C. wildlife branch is guilty of mismanagement of their responsibilities."

The directive said the intent of the order is to "ensure that an Indian who is following the traditional pursuit of taking game for himself and his family can do so without fear of prosecution as long as subsistence is his sole purpose."

Stays of proceedings already have been entered against a number of Indians charged with out-of-season hunting as a result of the directive.

Branch officials say they are angry because the directive refers only to native people when the law should treat everyone equally.

Questionable taste?

VANCOUVER (CP) — If the civic theatres board has its way, theatre patrons may never again be surprised by sex or violence on city-owned stages.

A large question mark should warn the public about any possibly offensive entertainment at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, Orpheum or the Playhouse, says the board in a report to be presented to city council Tuesday.

It would mark theatrical offerings containing "coarse language throughout, blasphemy or religious ridicule, nudity, simulated sex, recurring sexual references, racial or sexist ridicule and-or brutality, violence and bestiality," the report says.

Interior miners out on strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Interior groups of miners were on strike Friday — one group wanting a bigger cut of the increased price of silver and another because of an argument with a foreman and fears of mercury contamination.

At the southern Okanagan community of Keremeos, 38 employees of the Dankoe Mines Ltd. silver operation want a mid-contract renegotiation of wages so they can benefit from higher silver prices.

Ed Steele, a representative of the United Steelworkers of America, said the price of silver increased to a high of between $49 and $53 an ounce in terms of U.S. funds from $8 an ounce when the workers negotiated their contract a year ago.

In Kamloops, about 270 employees of Afton Mines walked out Thursday after a worker was suspended following an argument with a foreman.

Saanich declines to share archives' tab

Saanich will not contribute to the cost of renovating the old downtown library building at Yates and Blanshard for use as a Greater Victoria archives and for offices for community organizations, Mayor Couvelier said Friday.

Saanich's history deserves its own archives and space has already been acquired to house artifacts, Couvelier said.

He was commenting on a proposal to spend more than $176,000 on the Victoria-owned Carnegie building and its newer annex.

The city owns the Carnegie building outright but the annex is owned by Saanich, Esquimalt, Victoria and Oak Bay.

The library moves to the provincial government building, four blocks south, in April.

Couvelier said Saanich decided last year to sell its share in the annex when the library was moved but later agreed not to force a sale because Victoria wanted the structure used for community purposes.

But while it agreed not to force a sale, there was no commitment to pay for renovations, Couvelier said.

Saanich was content to have Victoria use the shared-ownership building for archives but Saanich should not be expected to shoulder additional costs.

The archives proposal, prepared by Victorial city manager James Bramley, will be submitted to the four core municipalities next week.

Bramley estimated startup costs at $176,375, most of it to upgrade and separate the two structures.

In addition, the first-year operating costs were estimated at $107,550.

It is proposed that the costs be shared on the intermunicipal formula with Saanich and Victoria each paying 40 per cent and Esquimalt and Oak Bay each paying 10 per cent.

Victoria City archivist Ainslie Helmcken has a small office on Pandora above the city parks department.

PCs planned baby bonus demise: Begin

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government had prepared a plan to abolish the family allowance program before it lost last month's election, says Health Minister Monique Begin.

Miss Begin says the proposal was one of several she rejected upon taking over as minister responsible in early March.

"I also discovered that there was some — let's put it that way — some strong feelings towards de-indexing the basic old-age pensions, I killed that, that was not our way of thinking," she said in an interview today with Standard Broadcast News.

Miss Begin said the Conservatives had planned to halt the family allowance plan by January, 1981. She said the Liberals "killed" that strategy.

"I didn't want to put the civil servants in an embarrassing situation, I listened to the general presentation and I said 'no, thank you very much.' That was that."

She said abolition of the entire program would have shocked the country.

Miss Begin said she would not be in favor of imposing an income test which would make high-income families ineligible for the allowance, a monthly bonus of $21.80 per child in most provinces and the territories.

An aide to Miss Begin said Friday that the minister also wanted to double the child tax-credit payments to lower-income families. The credit now is $218 a year per child for families who earned $19,620 or less in 1979.

Crystal to sparkle with dance

Two dances will help launch the new Crystal Garden which will open on schedule next Saturday.

The Four Seasons Musical Theatre will have a "good old times" dance in the newly-renovated building on April 5 and, one week later, the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a dinner-dance, also with the nostalgia theme.

Admission to the Crystal Garden will be free during the opening week, from March 29 to April 4.

Beginning April 5 admission will be $2 for adults, $1 for children between six and 16. Children under six will be admitted free, if accompanied by an adult. Admission for senior citizens is free except in June, July and August.

On Saturday, April 5, the Four Seasons dance will get under way at 7:30 p.m.

It will feature the orchestra of Chick Webb in a salute to events at the Crystal between 1925 and 1935.

There will be dance contests based on '20s and '30s styles with former YMCA official Archie McKinnon and Mayor Bill Tindall acting as judges.

There will also be songs from The Wonder of It All, the Four Seasons summer entertainment feature based on the life of Emily Carr.

From April 5 to 11 the Garden will be open until 9 p.m. daily and will feature a series of silent films from the collection of Charles Hoffman, together with piano accompaniment.

At the conclusion of the second week the chamber dance will be held, featuring Mart Kenny and his band. Feature vocalist will be Norma Locke.

Computer magic: three times nothing is still nothing

MANCHESTER (CP) — A businessman who received a computerized bill for no pounds, no shillings and no pence from the British Electricity Board promptly sent off a cheque for no pounds, no shillings and no pence and duly received a receipt for the same amount — nothing.

"This is what happens when we put too much faith in computers," said Geoffrey Turnbull, proprietor of a neighborhood service station. "I heard recently of a youth of 17 who applied for his very first driving licence.

"The computer sent him a licence bearing seven endorsements for driving offences.

"Then I read of a computer down in Wales which licenses vehicles and drivers. This one sent a driving licence reminder to a boy of six."

Tales of computer errors are popular in Britain. They appear in newspapers and magazines and are often heard on radio and television.

"At heart we all resent the suggestion that a machine can do the kind of work we do," said Benjamin Levett, a computer expert at Lancashire University. "We forget that humans also make errors and those made by computers are comparatively few."

David Bromley, a car salesman, was indignant when he received a new driving licence erroneously showing he had been jailed for stealing a motor scooter.

Anne Hayes was furious when her advertisement offering a sewing machine for sale continued weeks after it had been sold.

"The advertising manager was full of apologies but he blamed the computer," Mrs. Hayes said. "My advertisement had been programmed to run for 32 months and three days."

Members of the Royal Air Force in Shropshire are still chuckling over the computer which discharged an airman because he was pregnant and awarded wings to an RAF carpenter.

Computer engineers reveal that girls wearing nylon panties and slips sometimes upset computers by generating static electricity. They insist, however, that most computer errors are the result of incorrect programming by humans.

This was so in the case of a giant computer at headquarters of the British Football League. It arranged three matches for Southampton Reserves on the same Saturday because an insufficient number of teams had been loaded into the computer's memory bank.

Cabinet overruled by court

The B.C. Supreme Court has vetoed provincial government approval for a sewage outfall at Esquimalt Lagoon.

In a landmark decision, the court ruled Friday the cabinet exceeded its powers when it countermanded a decision by the provincial Pollution Control Board.

The court said the cabinet cannot set itself up as a court of appeal to rule on its own legislation.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's department said about 60 other provincial statutes could be affected by the ruling.

In addition, any other cases where the cabinet has overruled the PCB would have to be re-examined.

Albert Head Ratepayers Association president Shirley Wilde, who led a four-year citizens' battle against the outfall, said today she is "absolutely delighted."

"This shows you can take on the provincial government and win."

She said the decision will save the Albert Head beach for swimming.

"It is one of the few remaining clean beaches in the region and it would have been a terrible shame to have it polluted. Thousands of people were worried that the beach would be ruined."

She said she has been talking to ratepayer groups in the Keremeos-Cawston area where the cabinet allowed a sewage disposal project to go ahead despite a counter ruling by the PCB.

"This decision will help those citizens to overturn that cabinet ruling."

The events began four years ago when Block Bros. proposed a 70-home subdivision east of Albert Head.

Because some lots could not pass the percolation test for septic tanks, the developers proposed to leave some good lots unsold and have sewage drain into the land in the reserved area.

The regional board allowed the project to proceed on that basis but after lots were sold and homes were being constructed, health authorities questioned whether the land-drain process would work. A proposal for a sewage lagoon and outfall was substituted but this was rejected by the PCB because it would pollute the waters and beaches.

A group of citizens who had already bought lots in the subdivision threatened to sue the regional district.

The cabinet told the citizens it would agree to review the PCB order if they would drop their lawsuit.

After a hearing the cabinet overturned the PCB ruling.

This provoked anger from other residents in the district who were concerned about the effects on swimming areas.

Members of the Albert Head Ratepayers Association and other ratepayers formed The Concerned Citizens of B.C. and hired Victoria lawyer Robert Price to take the issue to the B.C. Supreme Court.

The group got 9,000 signatures on a petition opposing the sewer lagoon.

Price today said he was pleased, but not surprised, by the victory.

He said it appeared clear the cabinet could not act as a court of appeal over its own legislation.

Price said the court recognized that Ottawa was the only government that could perform that function, under Section 96 of the British North America Act.

Price said an appeal is properly only a question of law and the cabinet is not necessarily expert in that field.

The decision means the proposed $350,000 lagoon and outfall cannot be constructed for the housing project. No work had been done on the lagoon.

They aren't burning crosses, yet, but B.C.'s Klu Klux Klan is growing

By DEREK SIDENIUS

They haven't taken to burning crosses — yet — but B.C.'s growing membership in the notorious Klu Klux Klan is emerging from the shadows and showing its color.

Pure white.

The existence of the super-secret racist group in the province has been based for years only on rumors and speculation.

But enter Wolfgang Droege.

The 30-year-old Victorian is one KKK member who isn't afraid to speak out.

Call him a racist and he considers it a compliment.

"To me, all that means is someone who's proud of his own heritage," he says.

Call him a bigot and expect a different response.

"I object to that. A bigot is someone who discriminates and doesn't know why."

Droege, who quit his job with a Victoria printing firm last fall to become an organizer with the KKK, admits he discriminates against Jews and blacks and all those others whose skins aren't white. Why? Because mixing them all together produces disharmony, even chaos.

He believes races should return to their land of origin or, if the transplanted roots are too deep — as the case of the American negro — then create a separate nation for them.

What would be the boundaries?

"We're still working on that," he says.

Racial purity — that's what Droege's drumming.

And a surprising number of others are swinging to the same beat.

Since the B.C. KKK chapter was formed 18 months ago, membership has been steadily climbing and stands today at about 100, he says.

Most are in the Lower Mainland, especially Surrey, but practically every major city and town in the province has members including Victoria which has four or five on the active list.

The Toronto chapter is the only other organized group in Canada. There used to be a chapter in Alberta but it ceased to exist several years ago.

All told there are about 500 members across the country, Droege says.

It's still a far cry from the 20,000 in the United States where the organization is building strength under the leadership of the outspoken and audacious David Duke, national director and Grand Wizard of the Klan.

The developments in Canada haven't gone unnoticed.

Droege . . . calling him racist is a compliment

Duke was in Vancouver last year and plans a return trip March 30 to April 3. He'll be in Victoria March 31.

Droege, who was born in Nuremberg, Germany, and immigrated to Toronto at age 14, feels the growing interest in the KKK is a sign of the times.

When the economy turns sour, so does the public's tolerance for racial groups different from their own. Those groups become the scapegoats, the major causes of the ills. At least, that's the way the KKK sees it, he says.

"We know there is eventually going to be a depression. We're just preparing for it."

The suggestion that, if he doesn't like it here, why doesn't he return to Germany draws a curt reply: "This is my home now."

Droege says his devotion to extreme right-wing ideas dates back to his preteen days.

He can remember sitting on his grandfather's knee and listening to stories about the Nazis. His grandfather was a personal friend of the infamous Julius Streicher, an early propogandist of the Nazi

Parrot comes out unrepentant

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot, unrepentant to the end, was released from prison today after serving two months of a three-month sentence for defying back-to-work legislation in 1978.

"I don't pretend it was easy but at the same time I think it's the price we had to pay in our struggle for justice," Parrot told reporters outside the gates of the Ottawa-Carleton Regional Detention Centre.

"And we're going to continue that struggle with whatever we have to do in the future."

Parrot, president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, came out the doors of the prison carrying a heavy box of papers which he put down to embrace his wife Louisette and teenaged daughters.

About 40 supporters from the postal union and from the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which has crusaded in the labor movement on Parrot's behalf, applauded when he arrived at the gate. Some burst into singing "Solidarity Forever."

"Would I do it again? If the same circumstances occurred, there is no doubt."

He shook hands with colleagues from the union, some of whom visisted him daily in the prison so he could keep up with union business centring on negotiations with the federal government for a new collective agreement.

Hit where it hurts: CLC

Times News Services

The labor movement should start replacing the old-fashioned strike with new forms of forceable, intelligent collective action like the recent mass withdrawal of union funds from a bank, says Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott.

In an obvious reference to the October, 1978, postal workers' strike which he has criticized vociferously, McDermott said Friday in Vancouver that in a strong labor movement, unions cannot "run amok unilaterally and expect instant solidarity."

He said a congress affiliate facing a strike situation must sit down with other unions and agree on a planned course of meaningful action, instead of embarking on "headline-grabbing, sporadic, oft-times suicidal charges of the Light Brigade."

An example of the alternative, McDermott told the National Union of Provincial Government Employees convention, came last November when 14 employees of an eastern branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce were on the verge of striking for a union security clause in a first contract.

Instead, the CLC co-ordinated the mass withdrawal of about $300 million in unions' funds from the bank to protest the employer's refusal to accept the clause, he told delegates.

"The red alert went out at the Bank of Commerce," he said. "The S O S went out, and lo and behold, within two weeks we had that union security. That was collective action."

McDermott said Thursday's settlement of the Bell Canada strike resulted when the labor movement "put our money where our mouth is" and collectively donated $1.5 million to the strikers in less than two weeks.

"We need to demonstrate — in a forceable, intelligent way — real power in the real world, as opposed to the academic world," he said.

Earlier, the recently-jailed president of the 60,000-member Ontario Public Service Employees Union told delegates all workers have an inalienable right to strike illegally.

Sean O'Flynn, who in January served 23 days in jail for contempt of court after he urged Ontario jail guards to stage an illegal three-day strike, said unjust laws must be disobeyed until they are changed.

He earned applause from delegates by saying the guard's illegal strike "was a very responsible action."

"We don't put ourselves above the law; we're part and parcel of society," said O'Flynn, a teacher. "But we do reserve the right to break the law when we have absolutely no alternative open to us."

McDermott, asked if he agreed with O'Flynn's statements, replied: "There is no 'yes or no' answer to that. It depends on the circumstances."

Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, told delegates provincial government employees must cease being shrinking violets and become more political.

Teachers, policemen and hospital employees should belong to the Canadian Labor Congress and the federation of labor, he said.

Dolphins pine to death

MONTREAL (CP) — A strike by municipal blue-collar workers claimed its first victims Friday — a pair of female dolphins from the city aquarium.

Brigitte and Fanny starved to death, having all but refused to eat since their four regular trainers walked off the job with some 5,600 city workers Feb. 12.

Pulled from the water for a blood test, Brigitte died on a stretcher. Fanny was discovered lying on the bottom of the pool.

Of the four dolphins who remain, Kim and Judith are also on the critical list, barely able to summon the energy to swim round their pool.

Vogel probe tilted: watchdog

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of a Kootenay justice council says the ministerial investigation which cleared deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel of interfering in three criminal cases was not fairly conducted.

Joe Lucas, a local butcher and chairman of the Grand Forks justice council, said in an interview that Attorney-General Allan Williams' announcement Wednesday that an investigation cleared Vogel in all cases doesn't answer questions the council has about a local case involving Interior lawyer Mickey Moran.

"I would have thought that, if they wanted some answers, they should have come to the people who were asking the questions," he said.

"I don't think the review was fair without my being interviewed and I don't think it was fair in the conclusion they came to. I think the obligation of the attorney-general's department is greater than just making the statement they did."

The allegations of interfering in the criminal cases were made in a CBC television news program.

Moran was charged with impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test. Later, a third charge of dangerous driving was laid. Unlike the first two charges, dangerous driving does not carry a mandatory penalty.

The two more serious charges were dropped, Moran pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and received an unconditional discharge, meaning he received no penalty. The Crown did not appeal.

Lucas said in a telephone interview from Grand Forks that the way the investigation of the CBC's allegations was handled has left Kootenay residents wondering whether there is a different kind of justice for a well-known lawyer and another kind for others.

The least the attorney-general's department could do would be to go to
